MANICURE KILLS MAN SHE LIVED WITH WHO HAD BEATEN HER

Mrs. Ruth Evans Shoots Michael Marchlewski, Known as 'Polander Mike,' in Home at 2922 Belt Avenue Where They Had Formerly Lived.

SAYS SHE FIRED TO SAVE HER MOTHER

Asserts Man Appeared at an Early Hour With Two Revolvers and Threatened to Kill Everybody in the Place.

Mrs. Ruth Evans, 28 years old, a manicure, shot and killed Michael Marchlewski, 24, at 12:40 a. m. today in her home at 2922 Belt avenue, where he formerly lived in common-law marriage with her. She declares that she shot him after he had beaten her severely about the head and face with a revolver handle, and had threatened to "kill the whole damn bunch," meaning her mother, Mrs. Margaret Murray; her daughter, Evelyn Evans, 13, and herself.

At the city hospital, where she is under treatment, Mrs. Evans gave policemen and reporters her version of the killing of Marchlewski, who was known as "Polander Mike."

"I was getting medicine for my mother when I heard a knock at the side door," she said. "When I opened the door I saw 'Mike' with a revolver in each hand. He ordered me into the room next to my mother's and said he was going to kill the 'whole damn bunch,' meaning my mother, my daughter and me. He had beaten me so often in the past two years that I had become accustomed to it, but this was the first time he had ever threatened my mother and my little girl.

"He threw me across a bed and began beating me with one of the revolvers. He told me to scream. He said he wanted me to attract the attention of my mother and child so that they would come into the room and be killed. I asked him why he was after them and he said he had nothing against them, but was going to kill them to punish me.

"Pointed Revolver at Mother."

"I begged him to let me alone, but I would not scream for fear he would carry out his threat against my mother and child. He struck me repeatedly on the head and face and continually demanded that I scream. I struggled to get away from him and the noise brought my mother and child to the door of the room. He started toward my mother with his revolver pointed at her. I heard him say, 'I'm going to fix you.' I got up from the bed and went to a dresser where he had placed the other revolver. I picked it up and pulled the trigger.

"It was his life or the lives of my mother and child. I could stand for his beating me, and that was bad enough, but when he said he was going to kill my mother and little girl I lost control of myself. I don't know how many shots I fired. I didn't see him fall, but I know he is dead."

Five bullets entered Marchlewski's body. One struck in the center of the chest, two penetrated the abdomen and two entered the left side. He was lying face downward near the door leading from the room where he was killed to the room occupied by Mrs. Murray.

Story Partly Corroborated.

Mrs. Murray and the little girl corroborated part of Mrs. Evans' story.

"I was sleeping in the room with grandma," said Evelyn, "when I heard a noise in the other room. Grandma and I went to the door and we saw 'Mike' beating mamma. There was blood on her face. He saw us at the door and came forward toward us with a revolver in his hand. I heard three shots and ran out the back way to the home of a neighbor. As I was running across a lot behind the house I heard some more shots, and when I got back to the house he was dead."

Mrs. Evans, a divorcee, became acquainted with Marchlewski about three years ago and for more than a year prior to last September he lived at the Murray home. Mrs. Murray told the police that Marchlewski frequently beat her daughter and threatened several times to kill Mrs. Evans.

Since last September Marchlewski had been residing with his sister,

ROBBERS IN AUTO GET $1300 IN HOLDUP OF EMPLOYES OF DEPARTMENT STORE GARAGE

Three Men Invade Stix, Baer and Fuller Premises at 3720 Laclede Av., Take Pay and C. O. D. Money and Escape.

Three robbers held up employes of the Stix, Baer & Fuller garage, 3720 Laclede avenue, shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon, and took $765.60 of the week's payroll money, $483.01 of collections, and $58 from an employe, a total of $1306.61.

The robbers arrived at the garage in an automobile, which a fourth man was driving. One of them held up four men in the yard outside the office, and demanded their money. He got $58 from Sam Brenner, a driver. Of the others, one had no money, not having received his pay, and the two others succeeded in concealing their money and temporizing with the robber until it was time for him to leave.

The two robbers w ohentered the company's office found Hilda Siekmann, cashier, and another young woman there. They pointed their revolvers at the young women and proceeded to rob the cash drawer and a steel box which contained a part of the week's payroll money, as some employes had been paid and others had not called for their pay.

After robbing the office the two men, and the third who was working outside, got into the machine and rode on Laclede to Spring avenue, where the car was seen to turn north.

The three men wore hankerchiefs over the lower parts of their faces, but the one who help up the men in the yard had difficulty in keeping his handkerchief in place, as it dropped down several times.

WIFE HELD AS SLAYER ON KU KLUX EVIDENCE

Illinois Woman Held After Slaying of Husband in Florida Presumably From Ambush.

By the Associated Press.

DELAND, Fla., March 7.—Acting on information which they say was furnished by the Ku Klux Klan, the authorities today arrested Mrs. Alice R. Shields at St. Cloud on a warrant charging her with the murder of her husband, William A. Shields, formerly of Moline, Ill., who was shot and killed near here Feb. 6, supposedly from ambush.

Peter Smith, a negro, has been held as a suspect here since the killing, and after her arrest Mrs. Shields is said to have given officials a statement in which she charged the negro with the actual shooting. The authorities declared her statement was so "inconsistent with the known facts" that they were led to believe she knows more about the killing.

The couple operated a poultry farm near here, and the night of the shooting started home from Deland in an automobile. Mrs. Shields told the authorities that several miles from town her husband stopped the car because of an obstruction in the road and that when he alighted to remove it an unidentified person fired upon him. Shields was instantly killed and Mrs. Shields appeared to be suffering so greatly from shock that she was placed in a hospital here for several days.

The negro was arrested after officers said they had found in his home a double-barreled shotgun with one barrel discharged.

PHOTOGRAPH OF BLACK EYES GETS DIVORCE FOR HUSBAND

Walter Matthews Gave Picture-Testimony of What Wife and Man Did to Him.

Walter Matthews' divorce suit against Mrs. Lenna Matthews was on hearing in the Circuit Court at Edwardsville yesterday and Matthews was going over the grounds. He told how he arrived one day at his home in Collinsville and found his wife entertaining another man. He objected to that, of course, and——

He paused impressively and handed a photograph to Judge Gillham.

"This is what they did to me, Judge," he eluciated.

What they did to him, as certified by the photograph, was to give him two black eyes.

Matthews had not been unmindful of the evidential value of those two black eyes and his disarranged features, and as he could not expect them to stay that way he went to a photographer and had the picture made.

He got a divorce.

SALARIES (AND THE PROFITS?) OF BASEBALL SOAR

Star Shortstop in 1869 Got $1200, "Babe" Ruth's 1922-26 Contract Said to Call for $75,000 a Year.

NEW YORK CLUB MADE $750,000 IN 1921

American League Team's Receipts $2,000,000; Others, Including St. Louis Clubs, Prosper.

NEW YORK, March 7.—George Wright, star shortstop of the Cincinnati Red Stockings baseball team, played throughout the season of 1869 for a salary of $1200. Wright was the highest paid member of the team.

"Babe" Ruth has signed a contract with the New York American League club which will net him approximately $75,000 during the coming season. If continued for the full five years, George Herman Ruth will receive a total of not less than $375,000.

These figures are the cause of frequent conferences behind closed doors in which baseball magnates argue the question as to whether they are building a salary Frankenstein which will in the end turn and destroy what has been in the past a highly profitable business.

Salary Lists of Clubs.

It is estimated that the salary lists of the 16 clubs of the two major leagues will aggregate more than $2,000,000 this season. The maximum figures for any one club are placed at about $225,000, and the minimum figures a trifle over $100,000. To this expense must be added ground rent, travel charges, local, state and Federal taxes; interest on mortgages, officers' and clerical salaries and minor charges such as advertising, ticket printing and supplies.

Despite the overhead, neither of the New York clubs has the slightest ground for financial worry. The American League club's receipts during the regular season last year were estimated at $2,000,000. This was exclusive of world's series profits, reaching six figures. The Yankees paid $60,000 park rental; the club overhead and official expenses could not have reached $500,000; and money spent for new players did not amount to more than $250,000. Thus, with not a dollar invested in anything but baseball talent, and after dividing with the visiting teams, the club earned a profit of not less than $750,000. Only club officials know how much more.

The Giants were almost equally fortunate. For, although they had a park to maintain and paid a heavy lease rental, this was more than covered by returns from the American League use of the Polo Grounds and by the receipts from renting the park for football games and other athletic events.

Other Clubs Prosper.

The money taken in by the New York clubs is distributed beneficially throughout the circuits and helps to maintain the less fortunate teams. However, even these are increasingly able to spend money, as shown by the St. Louis National League club. In 1917 and during the war time, this club was reorganized. The next year the schedule was not even completed owing to war conditions. Yet, notwithstanding the club stockholders invested only $175,000 to begin with, and increased this by but $90,000 later on, they now have a club whose estimated value is between $500,000 and $600,000, one which probably could not be bought for that. Its stock in less than four years has risen from $40 to above par. It has paid off its debt and last year made money.

The steady financial progress of baseball in point of earning ability is shown in the increased capitalization of all clubs in the last 15 years. The Browns were launched in 1902 with a capital of $60,000. In 1908, with a capital of only $80,000, the team made $167,000. In 1915 R. L. Hedges, with an investment of $30,000 originally, sold out his share for more than $300,000.

The club today is valued at $700,000. Even the lowly Washington club of other days is now able to build grandstands and buy players on the strength of its added profits; while the Boston teams, saddled with enormous and inflated investments, is coming out of its troubles due to the increase in baseball prosperity.

A study of baseball salaries over a period of the past 30 to 40 years shows the steady increase which has developed from year to year. In the early seventies $1500 was a top-notch figure for a star player. At the beginning of 1900 players of

DEMONSTRATIONS AT HEARING ON BILL FOR SALE OF DOGS

"You're a Liar" Shouted at Humane Society Head When He Says Some Experiments Are Cruel.

500 PERSONS AT PUBLIC SESSION

About 300 Medical Students and 100 Women Humane Workers Mingle With Prominent Physicians.

The aldermanic chamber of the city hall was jammed with about 500 persons today when the board's Committee on Public Welfare took up public consideration of the bill which would permit medical schools to purchase dogs from the city pound at 75 cents each for purposes of experimentation.

After listening to arguments for three hours, the committee took the bill under advisement.

The demonstrations for and against the bill—hisses and boos, as well as customary applause—were so vociferous that at one time Chairman August H. Niederluecke threatened to clear the chamber.

This was when George E. Dieckman, superintendent of the Humane Society, declared that all experiments upon dogs were not cruel, but that many of them were cruel.

"You're a liar," some one in the gathering shouted.

Students and Women Present.

In the gathering were about 100 medical students from St. Louis University, about 200 from Washington University, and approximately 100 opponents of the bill, chiefly women who are members of the Humane Society. The delegation supporting the bill included many physicians, members of hospital staffs and laymen.

Health Commissioner Starkloff opened the debate, supporting the bill. He declared that the bill was in the interest of humanity and that the great strides in the medical profession in recent years had been made possible by animal experimentation. "Twenty million mothers in the United States owe the lives of their babies to anti-toxins taken from the horse," Dr. Starkloff said. "Cure of spinal meningitis is possible by a serum developed by experiments on a dog. A recent case of anthrax at the city hospital was cured by reason of diagnosis through a guinea pig.

Declares Bill Is Humane.

"I have a baby of my own. I wouldn't exchange one of its toenails for all the damned dogs in America. Wasserman tests for the diagnosis of syphilis are possible only through use of the guinea pig, sheep and rabbit. This bill is humane, logical and scientific. It is being opposed by maudlin sentiment. Literature depicting the use made of dogs and being distributed in this campaign is misleading, vicious and does not state the facts. I challenge anyone to prove a case of cruelty in handling of dogs in this work. Some people seemingly would wade through human blood to save dogs."

When Dieckman rose to speak there was hissing from the medical students. "To the study of medicine," Dieckman began, "might be added the study of good manners." He said that the Humane Society, since the administration of the city dog pound was turned over to it by the city, has expended about $3500 for the humane treatment of the dogs. Improved methods of dispatching them with gas had been installed, he said.

"Many Operations Cruel."

"The Humane Society considers that it would be a crime to turn over these dogs to the medical schools," he added. "Not all the operations are cruel, but many are extremely cruel."

When order had been restored, after the shout "You're a liar," Dieckman read from a paper he said had been delivered by Dr. Willard Bartlett of St. Louis before a medical meeting in Atlantic City.

The paper, as he read it, described experiments with "Lane bone plates," which necessitated breaking the dogs' legs. He said that the paper declared that one of the dogs escaped. "Presumably wearing the plates," Dieckman said.

"The doctors say," Dieckman continued, "that the reason they don't raise their own dogs is that the cost would be $10 each. Are the doctors cheap? It is the first time I ever heard of a doctor being cheap. After they get through with your pocketbook it looks like it has been vivisected."

Dieckman said that some Alder-

5 KILLED IN AIR TANK EXPLOSION IN KANSAS CITY

Ten Injured by Blast That Wrecks Wall of Car Barn and Shatters Windows in Neighborhood.

SAFETY VALVE FAILED TO OPERATE

Thirty Employes in Building Had Been at Work Just Eight Minutes When Accident Occurred.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 7.—An explosion of a compressed air tank this morning in the street car barns at Ninth street and Brighton avenue caused the death of five persons and injury of eight others. The explosion blew out the walls of the tool room and machine shops, adjoining, in which about 30 men were working. The three men killed by the blast were in the tool room.

A. E. Campbell, an attendant, in the air compressor room, was injured severely. Harold Haynes, the only other man in the compressor room, was protected by a stone switchboard, and escaped with bruises.

Had Been at Work 8 Minutes.

The men had been at work only 8 minutes. The blast, which was heard for three miles, broke windows in houses along streets near the barns. Instantly, hundreds of persons began running toward the scene. So many relatives and friends of men employed in the shops crowded in that the police were compelled to put up ropes to keep them back from the ruins.

The air compressor tank, six feet in diameter and 20 feet long, was in a room near the northeast corner of the shops, resting on two steel supports close to the ceiling of the room. It was kept filled by automatic machinery. The air was used to operate tools about the shops. No fire accompanied the explosion. The failure of a safety valve to operate was said by Henry S. Day, equipment engineer for the railways company, to have caused the explosion. Twisted pieces of the three-eighth-inch steel of which the tank was made, was found about the shops.

List of the Dead and Injured.

The dead: Earl W. Haybes, 26 years old, Kansas City; Clarence Legate, 20, Independence; Frank Baumgartner, 33, Kansas City; Omar Bly, 22, Kansas City, Kan.; J. P. Coleman, Independence.

PRESIDENT SAYS MINERS AND OPERATORS SHOULD KEEP FAITH AND CONFER

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.

THE belief of President Harding that the coal operators and miners should keep faith and get together before the expiration of the present agreement on March 31, was reiterated today at the White House.

The President, it was said, informed Secretary Davis that the Department of Labor should insist on both parties to the present contract observing the provision for a meeting of the operators and miners to renew the agreement before the expiration of the present one.

ORDER TO BUILD WALL ISSUED IN 7-YEAR ROW

Judge Gives Parties to Lengthy Feud Over Earth Washouts a Chance to Settle.

For seven years there has been a feud between Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McGurn of 5573 Powers avenue, and their next door neighbors, Richard Reichel and his sister, Clara, of 5571 Powers avenue. And now it turns out that it could have been prevented, or stopped, by the erection of a six-inch wall at a cost of $77. Circuit Judge Hall today gave them a chance to settle it by splitting the cost of the wall, $38.50 apiece. If they spurn his proposal for a settlement out of court, he will set the wheels of justice in motion on April 1.

The McGurns' land lies somewhat higher than the Reichels', and that has caused all the trouble. For seven years the McGurn land has been washing over on the Reichel land. The McGurns have blamed the Reichels for taking their land away from them, and the Reichels have blamed the McGurns for not keeping their land at home.

Both Sides Want Damages.

After numerous trips to police court, the McGurns two years ago filed an injunction suit to restrain the Reichels from removing earth along the division line in such a manner as to permit the McGurn land to fall over on the Reichel land. They also asked $500 damages for the land that had already fallen over. The Reichels filed a cross bill asking that the McGurns be restrained from letting their land fall on the Reichel land and that they be required to erect a wall to keep their land on their own side. They asked $1000 damages for the encroachment of McGurn land upon their land, which had already taken place.

The testimony left Judge Hall undecided as to who was most to blame for the migration of the McGurn land. So he went out and looked at it himself and concluded that the McGurns were most to blame, because the land that had washed over on the Reichel land had been taken from an excavation for a cellar and piled in such a manner as to facilitate migration.

Builder Gives Estimate.

While he was about it he consulted a builder of walls who said that one could be built for $77 which would stop the land migration and the feud. So the Judge went back to court and today handed down a judgment that the McGurns and Reichels go fifty-fifty on the building of the wall, to which end the case was continued to April 1.

NO SKYSCRAPERS FOR LONDON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 7.—There will be no skyscrapers for London, the Royal Institute of British Architects decided after a debate last night.

The real question was whether the height of buildings should be increased from 80 to 120 feet, this in the eyes of conservative London constituting a skyscraper. The proposal was defeated 79 to 8, it being contended that the streets of the city are already too dark. Nobody has a good word to say for the New York skyscrapers.

4 OPTIONS IN COMPROMISE MEASURE, AS DRAWN

Majority Members of House Ways and Means Committee Authorize Chairman Fordney to Present Measure to House Before Adjournment Today.

FULL COMMITTEE SESSION SATURDAY

In Final Form It Carries an Added Provision for Cash at Once for Veterans Entitled to Not More Than $50.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7. — Final agreement on the compromise soldier bonus bill was reached today by Republicans of the House Ways and Means Committee, who authorized Chairman Fordney to present the measure to the House before adjournment today.

Representative Fordney announced that the Democrats on the committee would be called in Saturday to pass formally on the bill. He said it was his plan to present the formal report approving the bill to the House immediately after the measure had been approved by the entire committee. The Democrats are not expected to submit a minority report.

As finally drawn, the measure carries four options, with an added provision for immediate cash payment to those former service men entitled to not more than $50 of adjusted service pay. It was stated that no changes of importance had been made in the new bank loan provision of the adjusted service certificate title or in the three other options, which are: Vocational training, home and farm aid, and land settlement.

Fordney Predicts Passage.

The effort to have included in the measure a provision providing for the payment of compensation to immediate relatives of men who have died since their discharge from the service was unsuccessful.

Chairman Fordney predicted that the measure would be passed by the House.

Text of Bank Loan Provisions of the Bonus Bill.

Under the provisions of the bill as now drawn, a veteran would mean any individual who was a member of the military or naval forces of the United States at any time after April 6, 1917 (the date of the war declaration), and before Nov. 12, 1918 (the day after the signing of the armistice). In computing the length of service, credit would be given for time served up to July 1, 1919.

Bank Loan Provision.

Following is the text of the bank loan provision of the bill, proposed as a substitute for the cash payment feature:

"(a) That a loan may be made to any veteran prior to Sept. 30, 1925, upon his adjusted service certificate only in accordance with the provisions of this section.

"(b) Any national bank, or any bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of any State, territory, possession or District of Columbia (hereinafter in this section called 'bank') is authorized to loan to any veteran upon his promissory note secured by his adjusted service certificate (with or without the consent of the beneficiary thereof) any amount not in excess of 50 percentum of its loan basis (as defined in subdivision F of this section), such loan to mature on or before Sept. 30, 1925. The rate of interest charged upon the loan by the bank shall not exceed by more than 2 percentum per annum the rate charged at the date of the loan for the discount of commercial paper under section 13 of the Federal Reserve act by the Federal Reserve

HARDING TO MAKE EARLY REPLY TO SENATE ON TREATY

Lodge at White House for Conference After Senate Asks About Effect on Ishii Agreement.

HUGHES ALSO SEES THE PRESIDENT

Bryan, in Statement, Advises Democratic Senators Against Delaying Action on Pacts.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7. — Prompt response by President Harding to the Borah resolution inquiring as to status of the Lansing-Ishii agreement between the United States and Japan in event of the ratification of the four-Power Pacific treaty was indicated today after the President had conferred with Senator Lodge, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Lodge spent considerable time with the President, presumably discussing the Borah resolution, which was adopted yesterday by the Senate after Senators Underwood of Alabama and Lodge, both arms conference delegates, had expressed the view that the four-Power treaty disposed of the Lansing-Ishii agreement by which the United States recognized that Japan possessed a special sphere of influence in China.

Secretary Hughes, who returned last night from a vacation trip to Bermuda also called at the White House during the morning and it is presumed went over the treaty situation with the President.

Advocating ratification of the four-Power treaty without hesitation or qualification, Senator Kellogg, Republican, of Minnesota, told the Senate today that the pact was so free from entangling commitments as to make reservations possible sources of embarrassment, rather than of advantage. The Minnesota Senator declared no agreement to employ force or to defend any other nation's rights was contemplated by the instrument, and characterized the "no alliance" reservation approved by the Foreign Relations Committee as wholly superfluous.

"It will undoubtedly be said," he continued, "that this may be so; but what assurance have we that it is so? There should be stronger ground for the adoption of reservations by the Senate than the argument that they can do no harm. If we are going to ratify the treaty covered with unnecessary reservations, because they can do no harm, we may find that other countries will do the same, and some of the reservations—theirs or ours—may hinder the ratification or weaken the effect of the treaty."

Bryan Advises Democrats Against Delaying Action.

It will be unwise for the Democrats to prolong the debate over the armament conference treaties in the Senate, because "every day's debate will tend to divert attention from the economic issue" in the coming congressional campaign, while the Democrats will be placed in the position of opposing "any steps toward peace," William Jennings Bryan declared in a statement here last night.

"The sooner these treaties are disposed of the better," Bryan declared. "I do not mean to say that no reservations should be adopted. Any reservation that any Democrat wants to propose should be proposed and acted upon, but there should be no unnecessary delay. We denounced the Republicans for delaying the action on the treaty of Versailles. Why should we bring condemnation upon ourselves by delaying action upon these treaties, especially when by doing so we divert attention from the economic question, which must be paramount in the fall campaign?"

Bryan declared that the Democratic party had a splendid prospect of "gaining the next Congress," which would "enable us to lay the foundation for a winning campaign in 1924." As might have been expected, he added, the "weakest point in this administration is its economic policy."

Senator Underwood of Alabama, the Democratic leader and a member of the arms delegation which negotiated the treaty, declared on the Senate floor yesterday that the four-Power and other pacts resulting from the arms conference would "wipe out" the celebrated "gentlemen's agreement" of 1917 entirely.

His construction of the situation was disputed, however, by other Senators.

Bank for the Federal Reserve district in which the bank is located.

Failure to Pay Principal.

"(c) If the veteran does not pay the principal and interest of the loan within six months after its maturity, or in any event by Sept. 30, 1925, the bank shall present the certificate and the note to the Secretary of the Treasury not earlier than May 30, 1925, and not later than Oct. 15, 1925. The Secretary shall thereupon cancel the note and the certificate and pay to the bank the amount of the unpaid principal due it and the unpaid interest accrued, at the rate fixed by the note, up to the date of the check issued to the bank. The difference between 80 percentum of the loan basis of the certificate at the time of its receipt by the Secretary, and the amount so paid to the bank, shall be immediately paid by the Secretary to the veteran if living. In case of the veteran's death after the expiration of the six months after the maturity of the loan, or in the case of his death after Sept. 30, 1925, such difference shall be paid to the beneficiary under the certificate, except that if such beneficiary dies before the veteran and no new beneficiary is named, or if the beneficiary in the first instance has not yet been named, then the payment shall be made to the estate of the veteran.

Effect of Veteran's Death.

"(d) If the veteran dies before the principal is due, the amount of the unpaid principal and the unpaid interest accrued up to the date of his death, shall be immediately due and payable. In such case or if the veteran dies after the principal is due but before the expiration of the six months after the principal is due or before Oct. 1, 1925, the bank shall, upon notice of death, present the certificate and note to the Secretary, who shall thereupon cancel the note and pay to the bank in full satisfaction of its claim the amount of the unpaid principal and interest, at the rate fixed in the note, accrued up to the date of the check issued to the bank; except that if prior to the payment the bank is notified of the death by the Secretary of the Treasury, and fails to present the certificate and note to the Secretary within 15 days after notice, such interest shall be only up to the fifteenth day after such notice. The Secretary shall deduct the amount so paid from the face value (as determined under Section 501) of the certificate.

"(e) When any loan is in default the bank shall within 30 days thereafter notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the facts relative to the note, the name of the veteran, and the number of his certificate.

Loan Basis of Certificate.

"(f) The loan basis of any certificate at any time shall, for the purposes of this section, be the amount of the adjusted service credit, plus interest thereon from Oct. 1, 1922, to such time, at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum compounded annually.

"(g) No payment upon any note shall be made under this section by the Secretary of the Treasury to any bank, unless the note, when presented to him, is accompanied by an affidavit made by an officer of the bank before a notary public or other officer designated for the purpose by regulation of the Secretary and stating that the bank has not charged or collected or attempted to charge or collect, directly or indirectly, any fee or other compensation (except interest as authorized by this section) in respect to or because of any loan made under this section by the bank to a veteran. Any bank which, or director, officer or employe thereof who, does so charge, collect or attempt to charge or collect any such fee or compensation shall be liable to the veteran for a penalty of $100 to be recovered in a civil suit brought by the veteran.

"(h) The Secretary of the Treasury shall make regulations for the enforcement of the provisions of this section."

Safeguarding Provision.

This safeguarding provision as to loans and certificates is contained in the bill:

"No certificate issued or right conferred under the provisions of this title shall be negotiable or assignable, or serve as security for a loan other than one made under the provisions of 502 and 504 (the provisions authorizing loans by banks of the Federal Government). Any loan made in violation of any provision of this section shall be held void. Whenever the Secretary of the Treasury finds that any such certificate or right has been negotiated or assigned or has served as security, in violation of a provision of this section, the rights of the veteran under this title shall be forfeited."

After Sept. 30, 1925, the Government would loan to veterans on certificates the amount advanced if the loan were made before Oct. 1, 1928, being 85 per cent of the sum of (1) the adjusted service credit of the veteran (figured on the basis of $1 a day for domestic service and $1.25 for overseas service, with the maximum fixed at $625 for those who served overseas and $500 for those who did not) plus (2) interest thereon from Oct. 1, 1922, to the date of the making of the loan, at the rate of 4½ per cent annually, componded annually.

If No Loan Is Made.

If the loan were made after Oct. 1, 1928, and before Oct. 1, 1942 (the date of the maturity of the certificate), the amount advanced would be 70 per cent of the sum of (1) the credit, increased by 25 per cent, plus (2) interest at the rate of 4½ per cent compounded semiannually.

If a veteran defaulted for one year in his payments to the Government, his certificate would be voided, but if he borrowed less than the maximum authorized by the law he would be paid 90 per cent of the difference between what he borrowed and what he was authorized by the law to borrow. If a veteran held his certificate for the full 20 years he would be paid the sum of his service credit increased by 25 per cent, plus 4½ per cent interest, compounded annually.

GANGSTER KILLED BY WOMAN, WHO SAYS HE BEAT HER WITH PISTOL

Mrs. Helen Brolyski, at 2700 Baldwin street. The police records show that he had been arrested 29 times since 1916 in connection with inquiries into gang murders and highway robberies. He was fined $100 once when a charge of robbery against him was dismissed and he was permitted to plead guilty to a minor degree of larceny.

Policemen found two revolvers on the floor in the room where Marchlewski was killed. One, that which Mrs. Evans said she took from the dresser, had four empty shells. The other contained three empty shells. Mrs. Evans said she could not recall having used both weapons, but she might have.

Mrs. Eugene Marks, a sister of Mrs. Evans, who was looking after Mrs. Murray and Evelyn Evans today, said that the room in which the shooting occurred usually was occupied by an adopted son of Mrs. Evans, who, she said, was a student at Washington University.

similar caliber were receiving from $5000 to $10,000 a season.

A few years later the famous Chicago National's infield drew the following figures:

Frank Chance, $10,000; Johnny Evers, $6000; Joe Tinker, $5500, and Steinfeldt, $4000.

About the same time Pittsburg was paying Honus Wagner $10,000 and Tommy Leach $4500.

The Athletics' famous infield, consisting of Eddie Collins, Frank Baker, Stuffy McInnis and Barry, drew a total of $17,500, of which Collins collected close to a third.

National Maximum Once $2400.

Some 20 years ago the National League had a salary limit of $2400. Ten years ago it was said the average salary in the major leagues was not more than $3300. Today it is almost double these figures.

The players are NOT, however, the only ones who have benefited by the rising salary wave. The managers of the clubs also profit. In 1898 Frank Chance received $1200 during his first year as a player with the Chicago Cubs. Fifteen years later he drew a salary of $25,000 a year and 5 per cent of the club's profits as manager of the New York Americans. About the same time Tris Speaker was drawing $15,000 a year with the Boston Americans. His present contract with Cleveland is much more remunerative. In 1916 Garry Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Nationals, testified that the salary for the team that year was $89,500, of which Christy Mathewson, as manager, drew $10,000; Charley Herzog $10,000 and Hal Chase $8000.

Went Up After Federal War.

Following the baseball war with the Federal League the magnates proclaimed loudly that salaries must come down but they went up instead. Other expenses accompanied them. President Ban Johnson of the American League receives $25,000 a year under a 20-year contract; Judge Landis, as high baseball commissioner, has a seven-year contract at $50,000 a year.

Manager McGraw of the New York Giants recently signed a five-year contract at figures said to be $50,000 a season. Two players purchased by his club within the past few months cost $125,000, for it was reported that Hienie Groh came from Cincinnati for $50,000 and Charles O'Connell will come from the Pacific Coast League a year hence at $75,000.

SAY RAILROAD PAY IS ABOVE GENERAL SCALE

J. W. Higgins, Representing Western Lines, Testifies Before Labor Board.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 7.—The men engaged in work comparable to that done on railroads, employed in 5327 industries in 28 of the Western states, are receiving wages much lower than those paid to employes of the railroads, according to a statement read today by J. W. Higgins, executive secretary of the Association of Western Railroads, before the United States Railroad Labor Board at its hearing concerning wage disputes between the men and the roads, in which the roads, as announced last fall, are seeking to reduce wages.

According to the statement, prepared after an exhaustive survey of the 318,893 employes of all classes studied in other industries, 247,866, or 77.73 per cent, were getting wages in December, 1921, lower than those paid by railroads for similar services. The statement said that in Arkansas, Arizona, Kentucky, Michigan, Mississippi and Tennessee, more than 90 per cent of employes in other industries are paid less than railroad wages.

Comparative Figures Cited.

In California, Louisiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, Texas, Utah and Wisconsin, according to the statement, from 80 to 90 per cent of labor is paid less than the railroads pay; in Colorado, Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico and Washington, 70 to 80 per cent of workers are paid less than the railroads pay. In Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota and Oklahoma, from 60 to 70 per cent receive lower wages than the railroads pay, while in South Dakota 55 per cent are being paid less.

There are states in the West, Montana, Nevada, Oregon and Wyoming, where less than 50 per cent of the employes receive lower wages than those paid by the railroads, says the statement.

"Discrepancies were found also in outside industries in principal cities," Higgins told the board.

"Kansas City pays 31 to 40 cents and St. Louis from 21 to 40 cents. In Little Rock and Memphis common labor gets 11 to 20 cents an hour and in New Orleans from 11 to 25 cents an hour. In San Antonio the range is from 21 to 30 cents; Dallas and El Paso, 16 to 25 cents; Fort Worth and Galveston, 26 to 30 cents."

Variation in Wages Shown.

Higgins said that while the roads wish the wages paid to be fair and adequate, it was not believed that the transportation act intended a flat rate to prevail throughout the country. In addition to citing the statistics, showing the difference in wages paid common labor in principal cities of the West, he presented data to show that wages for metal crafts vary as to locations. He also stated that 89.5 per cent of the men in the metal crafts in other industries receive lower wages than men doing the same work for railroads.

Specific instances given brought out that the majority of these men receive from 41 to 65 cents an hour whereas the railroads for the same work pay the maximum wages for a mechanic, which are higher.

The alleged "petting parties" between the Big Four brotherhoods and the carriers came up again today when E. J. Manion of St. Louis, president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers and sponsor of the "petting" charges, admitted that he had sought a "bid" to such parties, but had been turned down.

Referring to Mr. Manion's statement yesterday that the invitations to the "petting parties" proved the roads were showing favoritism in dealing with their employes, W. L. McMenimen, labor member of the board, asked Manion if he had not sought an invitation to such parties.

Was "Turned Down Flat."

"Yes, and I got turned down flat," replied Manion. "In my opinion that is evidence that there is favoritism being shown."

"The lower classes of railroad workers are the only ones hit, while the train service men—the Big Four, if you please—are invited to 'petting parties' in the road's private offices," said Manion in his argument yesterday.

DIVORCE GRANTED TO E. R. METHUDY AFFIRMED

Court of Appeals Hands Down Decision in Case in Which Decree Was Awarded in 1920.

The St. Louis Court of Appeals today affirmed the divorce decree granted Eugene R. Methudy, president of the Methudy Tire and Rubber Co., 3549 Lindell avenue, by Circuit Judge Calhoun, Aug. 12, 1920. The wife, Mrs. Edna Methudy of 1722 Waverly place, had appealed from Judge Calhoun's decision.

The Methudy divorce case was on trial for two weeks in July, 1920. Methudy charged that his wife associated with Ozro Dixon, sales manager of a loose-leaf binder company, at the Midland Valley Club, that she was neglectful of her husband, and that she had urged her husband to make a financial settlement and let her divorce him.

In arguing the case before the Court of Appeals last May, Mrs. Methudy's lawyer, Randolph Laughlin, charged that Judge Calhoun had permitted politics, in connection with the Republican primary of 1920, to enter into the case.

This allegation was based on the fact that one of Methudy's lawyers, A. M. Brinkman, was a candidate for Republican Committeeman of the Fourteenth Ward in the primary of August, 1920, and was supported actively by Judge Calhoun. The primary campaign was going on while the divorce case was being heard.

Attorneys for Methudy denied that politics had anything to do with the Court's decision, and their contention appears to have been accepted by the Court of Appeals. Commissioner Nipper of the Court of Appeals wrote the decision.

Criticises Mrs. Methudy.

The decision declares that Mrs. Methudy was not guilty of actual unfaithfulness to her marriage vows, and that no substantial evidence to that effect was shown. It criticises her severely for her conduct with Dixon at the Midland Valley Club. The opinion says:

"Where the conduct of the wife with Dixon was such that the kitchen help at the club had cause to refer to Dixon as 'the redheaded Methudy,' and where the wife would permit another man, practically a stranger, to hold her hand under such circumstances as detailed by witnesses, and where she would walk arm in arm with him on the golf links in her husband's absence, and her conduct was such as to create comment among disinterested people at the club, such conduct would of itself amount to a very grave indignity."

Comment on Political Charge.

As to conflicts in the testimony, the opinion says that the trial Judge had the best opportunity to observe the appearance and demeanor of witnesses. As to the political charge, the opinion says:

"We agree that the judiciary should not become a political judiciary, but it would be unreasonable to hold that, merely because a Judge, acting in his capacity as a private citizen, sought to exercise his right of suffrage for good government, he would thereby become prejudiced, unfit and incompetent to sit in the trial of a case. While Judges should be free from any suspicion of influence which might warp their judgment, and cause them, even unconsciously, to assume an attitude other than one of absolute impartiality, it is also important that they should not be subjected to unreasonable attacks, ill founded and not based on reasonable grounds."

The Court of Appeals allowed Mrs. Methudy $6000 suit money, in addition to $1750 previously allowed. About $3500 of the expense represents the cost of writing up the record, an exceptionally voluminous one, for the Court of Appeals. While her appeal was pending, an order of Judge Calhoun allowed $125 a month alimony to the wife, but this will now cease. No provision for permanent alimony was made in Judge Calhoun's decree.

Methudy testified in the hearing before Judge Calhoun, that he was worth $90,000. Mrs. Methudy was the daughter of E. J. Dienst of 5801 Page boulevard, president of a leaf tobacco company. They were married Jan. 12, 1916, and separated in November, 1919.

ZOO DIRECTOR HAS VISION OF A REAL LIVE PLESIOSAURUS

Buenos Aires Scientist Says Description of Amphibian in Patagonia Lake Is Mesozoic.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, March 7.—Belief that a plesiosaurian monster, an amphibian of the mesozoic order generally believed to exist only in fossil form, is still alive in Patagonia was expressed yesterday by Prof. Clementi Onelli, director of the Buenos Aires Zoological Garden. He announced that he had received credible reports that such a monster was seen in a lake in the territory of Chubut, near the Andes Mountains.

Prof. Onelli made public a letter from an English friend named Sheffield, saying that, while hunting in the Andes he discovered a trail of flattened-out vegetation near a lake, indicating the track of an animal of enormous weight. Later, says the letter, Sheffield saw in the middle of the lake an animal, with a colossal neck like that of a swan, whose movements in the water indicated that the body was shaped like a crocodile. He said harpoons would be necessary to capture the monster.

Prof. Onelli said this evidence confirmed two previous reports that such an animal had been seen alive during the last year in the same region, where various scientific expeditions have made rich finds of animals of geological ages. He said an expedition from Argentina or some other country ought to be sent to capture the animal.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in 1912, published a novel entitled "The Lost World," the adventures of which were based on a supposed encounter of explorers with prehistoric monsters, surviving to our era in a remote wilderness of South America.

POET KEMP TRAINING FOR PUGILISTIC BOUT

Laureate of Kingdom of Souls in Revolt to Meet Sam de Witt, 'Ousted Socialist Assemblyman.'

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Harry Kemp, the Towsled Laureate of the Kingdom of Souls in Revolt, better known as Greenwich Village, will temporarily abandon poetry for pugilism.

He has corked the bottle of violet scented vitriol, laid aside his inlaid mother-of-clam shell goose quill, placed the rhyming dictionary on the shelf between the box of soda crackers and the plaster cast of Keats, and there's an empty chair at the Brevoort, where someone else may sit these nights dropping hot cigarette ashes on the table cloth.

Harry spends his days up in Madison Square, with "Philadelphia" Jack O'Brien, placing himself in harmonious propinquity to the intricacies underlying the gentle art of swatting his fellow man for a percentage of the gate receipts. When he leaves the Garden at night he hurries down to the Tea N Tea on McDougal street, where Sam Schwarz has his training table in operation.

Harry is going to fight Sam de Witt, one of the "ousted Socialist assemblymen," who also writes a little. Like Harry Kemp, Sam de Witt specializes on verse, the only difference between the two poets being that Sam looks upon verse as a walking stick and Harry insists upon using it as a crutch.

If you don't see much of a divergence between the two modes of procedure, test the virtues of each, some time. But, before doing so, remember that polo playing is prohibited on the front lawn of the poor farm.

Kemp's Very Own Idea.

The idea of a boxing bout originated with Harry Kemp. Although Harry is pretty well known to tea drinkers of the village, where he mooches round wearing a laurel wreath instead of a Denman Thompson, there are other spots on the globe in which the Box Car Poet has left the impresss of his personality.

He became a hobo for the same reason that Jack London hit the Out Trail. It was a case of the gypsy blood to the gypsy blood—over the world and under the world and back to the hobohemia of the Tea N Tea.

Harry knows all the "jungles" from Frisco to Seacacus. During his wanderings he found time to drift in and out of the University of Kansas. Later he took up Socialism, joining the Arden Colony, of which Upton Sinclair was founder.

It was in the Arden Colony that the poet Kemp acquired prose notoriety by eloping with Mrs. Sinclair. The affair was imbued with the if-I-don't-like-him-shouldn't-I-leave-him motive.

Harry and the lady soon separated, however. In the fall of 1913, Harry went to Europe as a self-invited guest aboard the Oceanic, and was put into an English jail for his free ride. Friends helped him out and he got back to this country $2.85 to the good—almost as much as an editor would pay for a sonnet on "The Pathos of the Ponderous."

Harry went to "Philadelphia" Jack O'Brien the other day and explained to him that he'd like some instruction in the "manly art." He mentioned his coming bout with Sam de Witt.

Sam, it may be mentioned here, in his early days on the East Side in newsboy frays and more serious brawls learned how to handle himself. Before entering college he turned his knowledge of fisticuffs to professional account. As "Young Frenchy" he earned enough money to find time to delve into the mysteries of Carl Marx.

"I'll have to know something of boxing to whip De Witt," Harry explained to "Philadelphia" Jack O'Brien. "Sam Schwartz, my manager, is arranging to run the bout here in the Garden. The proceeds are to constitute a prize for the best poem written during the year, the judges of the poem to be Richard Le Gallienne, Edna St. Vincent Millay and people like that."

In return for his boxing lessons O'Brien is to get a copy of Kemp's poems, to be issued next fall. In the meantime Kemp is teaching O'Brien how to use poetry as an outlet for the emotions.

No date has been set for the bout. Sam Schwartz says if he can't make better arrangements he's going to try to ring it in as a preliminary to the Greb-Gibbons mill.

Kemp said yesterday through his manager:

"The pugs I have met so far have some of the poets I know backed up against the ropes when it comes to soul-swiping."

WOMAN WITNESS IN EXPENSE PADDING INQUIRY NOT FOUND

Cole County Sheriff Hears Mrs. Anna Marie Bruegging of Jefferson City Has Gone to Chicago.

SAID TO HAVE HELD JOB UNDER MOSBY

Deputy Beverage Inspector From St. Louis Among the First to Testify Before Grand Jury.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 7.—When the grand jury inquiry here into charges of expense account padding in the State beverage inspection department and allegations of irregularities in the office of State Auditor Hackmann, entered its second day, Attorney-General Barrett announced today that deputies endeavoring to serve a subpena on Mrs. Anna Marie Bruegging of Jefferson City, a witness in the beverage matter, had been unable to find her. She is reported to be in Chicago, Barrett said.

Mrs. Bruegging, who is the wife of an employe of the Jefferson City Postoffice, is said by Barrett to have been on the beverage pay roll as A. L. Kloepple, which was her maiden name. Representative E. G. Davidson of St. Louis is under indictment in St. Louis on two charges of third degree forgery in connection with the expense accounts of two deputy State beverage inspectors which passed through his hands on the way to the office of the department. It will be remembered that T. Speed Mosby, head of the department, allocated to Davidson a number of jobs in January, 1921, as reward for Davidson's assistance when the beverage inspection bill had been pending in the legislature during a previous session.

St. Louisan Called as Witness.

L. G. Adams of 4450A Easton avenue, one of the deputy inspectors who obtained his job through Davidson and who was a witness before the St. Louis grand jury that indicted Davidson, was before the grand jury today. Adams' statement to the Attorney-General at the time Barrett's investigtaion started last November was to the effect that each month he signed an expense account form blank and turned it along with a memorandum of his expenses over to Davidson, who made out the formal account transmitted to the beverage department. Although employed by the Anchor Cold Storage Co. in St. Louis, and notwithstanding that he never went out of town on State business with the exception of one time, his expense account regularly showed trips out in the State and showed totals considerably in excess of the sums Adams represented his expenditures.

Other witnesses were Mosby and Williams Kiely, chitf clerk, and J. P. Reeds of 4201A Easton avenue, St. Louis, who, like Adams, was appointed as a Deputy Beverage Inspector at Davidson's instance. Reeds, who is an employe of the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co., in its St. Louis factory, held that position throughout the time he was acting as a deputy. ch the same thing happened with expense accounts as with those Adams, Reeds told Barrett.

In a recent letter to Mosby, the Attorney-General said that Luther M. Wilson, chief deputy in the department, had charged for service at hotels in Eldorado Springs, Walker, Kansas City and Springfield which the records of those hotels do not bear out; Wilson's son and daughter were before the grand jury yesterday. Wilson had been under subpena, but was told he would not be asked to testify. Mosby, his chief clerk, and the rest of his office assistants, are under subpena.

Drops Dispute Over Vouchers.

State Auditor Hackmann said today that he has determined to allow Attorney-General Barrett to retain custody of the beverage expense account vouchers over which he and Barrett had a controversy yesterday.

It became known today that deputies who have been trying to serve grand jury subpenas on E. W. Painter of St. Louis, second cousin of Davidson and formerly a Deputy Beverage Inspector, and L. L. Bochner of St. Louis, who for three months was on the beverage payroll in a similar capacity, have been unable to locate either.

Immigration Authorities Detain Americans Recruited in United States for Service Against Moors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Nineteen Americans who were recruited in the United States for service in the Spanish Foreign Legion to fight rebellious Moors, were detained by immigration officials and sent to Ellis Island last night when the America docked.

The authorities declared that in joining the Spanish forces the men had forfeited their citizenship rights in the United States.

Recruiting in the United States for the Spanish forces was under way last summer and fall at New Orleans and at New York.

The America, United States Line, while 370 miles at sea, was in radio communication with the receiving station at Elberon, N. J., yesterday

Among the ex-soldiers is George Harry of Cleveland, wounded in action, having suffered a bullet which imbedded just above his heart. Harry was ming home, that American surgeons might operate on him as he feared to entrust his life to Spanish surgeons.

DEMONSTRATIONS AT HEARING ON BILL FOR SALE OF DOGS

men had been told that they would not be re-elected if they opposed the bill. "I think there are enough humane people in St. Louis to attend to that," he declared.

Would "Vivisect Bill."

He referred to the recent operation on a dog, conducted at Washington University before the Committee on Public Welfare, as a burlesque. "Of course the dog used in that operation died under an anesthetic, which was all right, but many of the dogs are permitted to live. Otherwise the experiment would not be complete.

"It is an idiotic bill," Dieckman concluded. "The committee should take it, vivisect it and permit it to die."

Rabbi Leon Harrison, supporting the bill, said that we did not hesitate to send millions of men into battle to make the world safe for democracy, and we should not hesitate to sacrifice a few animal lives to make the world safe for humanity.

Douglas W. Robert, president of the Humane Society, declared that the Humane Society should not unwillingly be made a party to supplying dogs for vivisection. He said that he realized that vivisection was necessary, and that a dog's anatomy most closely resembled the human anatomy. "But a dog most closely approaches a human in feelings, also," he declared, and made a sentimental appeal, which he said was not a maudlin but heartfelt feeling, that dogs be not sacrificed. He mentioned that a monument to service of dogs in the war had been erected in France.

Robert also touched upon the financial cost of an appendicitis operation in referring to the unwillingness of the medical profession to raise their own dogs at a cost of $10. He told of the fees paid to doctors, nurses and hospitals for operations.

"How about a lawyer?" someone interrupted.

"They get all the traffic can bear," Robert replied, "but they do not ask the city to buy their books."

Resents Reference to Fees.

Dr. A. H. Hamel, president of the Missouri State Medical Society, speaking his resentment of the reference to physicians' fees, recalled that the St. Louis Medical Society now is caring for 280 crippled children free of charge. "I have been skinned by lawyers and have skinned a couple," he said. He called opponents of the bill "parlor humanitarians."

The Rev. Michael J. O'Connor, acting president of St. Louis University, who said that he spoke also the sentiment of Archbishop Glennon, referred to the bill as praiseworthy and asserted that lower animals were placed upon earth on serve the higher order.

Frederick W. Lehmann, former Solicitor-General, told of physicians exposing themselves to yellow fever in order that they might contract it and permit their fellow physicians to study the disease for the protection of humanity.

Others who spoke for the bill were the Rev. John W. McIvor, Edward Gengenbach, assistant secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and Frank H. Gerhart, who opposed passage.

SPRINKLING BID IS $307,736 OR $433.18 FOR EACH MILE

Lowest Figure Received by Board of Public Service Provides for Start on April 1.

The lowest bids for the city sprinkling contract in the 42 districts, at today's opening of bids by the Board of Public Service, reached a total of $307,736, or $433.18 a mile for the 710.4 miles. The total of the lowest bids received recently, which the board reconsidered and rejected after once accepting them, was $379,596, or $534.34 a mile, 15 per cent higher than the 1921 price per mile.

The bids opened today were for 10 months, beginning April 1. The bids recently reconsidered and rejected were for 12 months, beginning Feb. 1. Because of the rejection of the bids, there has been no sprinkling since Feb. 1, but weather conditions have been such that little or no sprinkling has been needed in that time, and little would have been done if contracts had been in force.

Last year's contract figure was $328,888, or $465.62 a mile for a slightly less mileage than that of this year. That contract was for 12 months. The names of those making the lowest bids were not immediately obtainable, as the first figuring done by the board's experts was on the amounts of the bids.

Hughes Returns From Bermudas.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Secretary Hughes arrived last night from his vacation trip to Bermuda and went immediately to his home, saying he would be at his office in the State Department early today.

4 YOUNG MEN LOCK UP MAIDS AND SEARCH HOME FOR LIQUOR

Employes of Mrs. W. C. McBride Believe Intruders Got No Loot.

Four young men last night at 8 o'clock took possession of the home of Mrs. William C. McBride, 29 Washington Terrace. Two maids, who were in charge in the absence of the family in Bermuda, were locked in a bathroom, after which the robbers searched the house for liquor. One of the young men was armed.

They obtained nothing, so far as the maids and the police could determine, the lock on a cement wine cellar in the basement being unbroken. The maids told the young men that a recent debut and a wedding in the family had depleted the liquor stock. They told the police they had no knowledge of the contents of the wine cellar.

The four men appeared at the kitchen door, which was opened by one of the maids, who thought that two young women friends whom they were awaiting had arrived. The young women arrived after the maids had been in the bathroom 45 minutes and released them.

BRIDE OF WILLIAM PICKEL JR, GETS $5000 FOR DOWER RIGHTS

Prenuptial Agreement Is Recorded in Which Wife Agrees Not to Contract Debts.

An agreement date Feb. 23, signed by William Pickel Jr. and Mrs. Katherine McKeown Anderson before their marriage, has been filed with the Recorder of Deeds. It provides that, in lieu of dower rights, Mrs. Pickel shall accept $5000, in three installments, the first of $1000 payable within a year after the marriage, the second of $1500, payable in two years, and the third of $2500, payable in three years.

The agreement provides that in the event of death of either, or their divorce or separation (from whatever cause) before the payments have been completed, deferred payments shall no longer be due or payable.

By the agreement, Mrs. Pickel has obligated herself to contract no indebtedness of any sort, with any tradesman or other person, in the name of Pickel or on his credit.

Pickel is vice president and general manager of the Pickel Marble and Granite Co. His bride lives at 4039 McPherson avenue, and this also appears, in the 1921 city directory, as Pickel's address.

TWO ROADHOUSE PROPRIETORS ARE FINED ON LIQUOR CHARGES

St. Louis County Farmer Also Penalized $200 for Having Still and Three Barrels of Mash.

Martin Cottler, owner of a roadhouse at 320 Ellen avenue, St. Louis County, was fined $350 by Federal Judge Faris today on his plea of guilty of having liquor in his possession.

The customary fine assessed against individuals for having liquor in their possession has been $250, but Judge Faris remarked that "it costs more when a roadhouse is concerned."

Dewell Gross, proprietor of a roadhouse on the North and South road, in St. Louis County, pleaded guilty to possession of liquor and was fined $300.

John Obenhaus, a St. Louis County farmer, pleaded guilty to having the instruments of manufacture, consisting of a still and three barrels of mash, and was fined $200.

Thomas Basich, proprietor of a soft-drink place at Seventh street and Franklin avenue, stood trial, and it took a jury five minutes to find him guilty. He was fined $350.

LUYTIES AUCTION DRAWS A MIXED ASSEMBLAGE

Lodging House Keepers Rub Elbows With Elite at Sale in Portland Place.

With the red flag of the auctionerr flying from the front porch, and trucks of second-hand dealers lining the front curb, interspersed with shining limousines, a public auction sale of contents of the home of the late Herman C. G. Luyties, 36 Portland place, was held yesterday.

Servants from surrounding homes idled on the sidewalks and front lawns, gazing curiously at groups going to and from the residence, while others seemed to make it convenient to work near front windows part of the time.

Inside the residence, an auctioneer stood at various times on beds, chairs and lounges and proclaimed in strident voice the qualities of the furnishings as they were placed on sale.

Rooms Are Crowded.

Each of the rooms was crowded, in turn, as the auctioneer proceeded through them, secondhand dealers and rooming house keepers rubbing elbows with women who came in the fine cars, and bidding against them until prices went higher than they were willing to pay.

"You have to have a full pocketbook to buy anything in there," one woman who was seeking bargains said, as she departed during the early stages of the sale.

The auctioneer gave a recital rivaling some given by monologists on the vaudeville stage; as he droned the bids as they mounted.

"We can't give you this bed, lady," he told one modishly garbed woman who said other things had been included with the bed in the sale of furnishings in Luyties' room. At other times he cajoled and gently "spoofed" the bidders.

Champagne Cooler Bought.

Cocktail shakers, steins, a champagne bucket and other articles smacking of preprohibition days were placed on sale when the auctioneer reached the dining room. The champagne bucket was bid in for $3.60.

"Aha! You must have a private stock," the auctioneer remarked to the buyer.

"No, I'm just going to keep my goldfish in it," was the rejoinder.

A gilded bric-a-brac cabinet was sold for $16. The auctioneer remarked the glass could be used as windshields for the buyer's automobile and money would be saved.

Art Dealer Explains Works.

The auctioneer had an art dealer on hand to explain to buyers the artistic value of paintings and pieces of statuary as they were placed on sale. The art dealer would mount a chair, dilate on the merits of each piece and the reputation of the artist who created it, and at once the auctioneer would begin: "What am I bid? What am I bid?" until an offer was made.

Among the paintings was one by George Inness, which sold for $130. A painting by Hugo Fisher, Dutch artist, was sold for $73, and one by Oscar E. Berninghaus, a St. Louis artist, went for $127. Among the works were two pieces of statuary of undetermined pedigree. One of them was of a nude woman, bending over in graceful posture, which sold for $125. The other piece, that of an athlete about to hurl a discus, was sold for $85. A small bust of Cicero was sold for $1.40.

A silk top hat, which sat on the mantle of one of the upstairs rooms alongside a German helmet, sold for $1.25. The helmet was bid in at $2.50.

COL. RUMBOLD'S WIFE DIES AT WASHINGTON

St. Louisan, Unaware of Situation That Required Operation, on Way Back to Eastern Home.

Mrs. Helene Rumbold, 56 years old, wife of Col. Frank M. Rumbold of St. Louis, died suddenly at Washington, D. C., early this morning.

Telegrams received by her brother, Edward Abend, vice president of the Belleville Savings Bank, stated that she suffered a swelling of the throat yesterday and an immediate operation was performed.

Col. Rumbold, who commanded the 128th (St. Louis) Field Artillery overseas in the World War, has been serving with the Militia Bureau of the Army General Staff at Washington, where he and his wife lived at California avenue and Columbia road N. W. Col. Rumbold recently attended a meeting of National Guard associations at New Orleans, and after stopping in St. Louis for several days, departed yesterday at noon for Washington, without having heard of his wife's ailment, if it had stricken her at that time. He arrived in Washington this afternoon.

Mrs. Rumbold's sister, Mrs. Lina A. Day, lives at Washington, and a daughter by a former marriage, Mrs. Curt Heinfelden, of Chicago, has been visiting her there. Mrs. Rumbold's father was Edward Abend Sr., a wealthy Belleville banker. She married Sam Brunaugh of St. Louis, who died about 12 years ago. She married Col. Rumbold in 1913. He had been Adjutant Geneal of Missouri from 1909 to 1913.

The Rumbolds lived in St. Louis at the Buckingham Hotel. Col. Rumbold's work at the capital was in helping to administer the parts of the national defense act relating to the National Guard. It is believed the body of Mrs. Rumbold will be buried here.

Webster Bond Issue Plan Indorsed.

At the meeting of the Webster Groves Community Council last night the proposal for a $25,000 bond issue to provide funds for the building of a city hall, which will be voted upon on April 3, was indorsed. The Council recommended the formulation of an ordinance for the condemnation and remaking of the Ozark Trail, which follows the Big Bend road at Webster Groves. The appointment of a special commission of three members of the Council to fill vacancies on the School Board was recommended. A "clean-up" campaign during the early spring was approved.

GEORGE COHAN PUTS PEP IN TRIAL OF $50,000 SUIT

In Yellow Shirt and Black Tie, He Jumps Right Into Part in Defense Against Hilliard.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7—George M. Cohan, wearing a yellow shirt and collar and a black silk bow tie, but otherwise inconspicuously attired, gave a spirited performance yesterday afternoon as the defendant in a drama before Supreme Court Justice Ford and a jury.

Cohan jumped into his part without delay and told the Justice, the jury, the lawyers and as much of the wide, wide world as was congregated in the courtroom, what a 100 per cent success he was as an actor-manager-playwright.

The story, up to Cohan's entrance, was, briefly, that Robert C. Hilliard, rival actor-manager-playwright, had appeared as plaintiff in a suit for $50,000 damages, alleging his former friend, George, had failed to live up to a promise to rewrite "Honest John O'Brien" for him after taking over Hilliard's interest and part in "A Prince There Was," in December, 1918.

George didn't stop even to give a scornful laugh when he took the stand. He plunged right into the tale of how he had rewritten "A Prince There Was" for Hilliard after the original version had proved a failure.

"I pulled Hilliard out of a hole and paid him $25,000 for something he couldn't get a nickel for anywhere else," he said. "For the first few days I was getting only $500 or $600 a week at the box office, because the public didn't know I was in the show. After I had built up the piece, it was different.

What He Heard About Hilliard.

"While I was doing this, I heard Hilliard was going around at the Lambs' Club showing the box-office receipts for those first five or six nights."

When he paid Hilliard $25,000 for his interest in "A Prince There Was," Cohan said he had promised to look over "Honest John O'Brien," which he had written some years before, and see if it could be adapted for Hilliard. He decided it could not be rewritten and was ready to write another play for Hilliard when he heard about the Lambs' Club incident.

He wrote to Hilliard, he testified, that he did not think he could write a play for him under the circumstances. "I can't do my best work for a man unless I am pulling for him," Cohan explained.

Hilliard's reply to his letter was that he would not appear in any play that Cohan wrote.

Cohan confessed that, while Hilliard was still in the cast of "A Prince There Was," he received as manager "the very small salary of $1000 a week as compared with Hilliard's $1750."

"Is $1000 a week a small salary?" asked William M. K. Olcott, attorney for Hilliard.

"Yes. For me it is very small," was George's answer.

How Cohan Builds Plays.

Cohan told how he wrote plays.

"I write a scene at a time. Sometimes I have not even a first act. I come downtown with a scene, start rehearsing it and build up the play during rehearsals," he said.

Olcott asked him if he lost any money on "A Prince There Was."

"I never lost any money on anything in my life," Cohan shot back. "I didn't make much on that play, but I made a little."

Hilliard in his testimony disclosed that he would be 65 this spring; he has a middle name, Cochran, and he is president of the James Everard Brewing Co. His wife, who was in court with him, was formerly Miss Olga Everard.

MAN SENTENCED TO 25 YEARS FOR ATTACK ON GIRL, 13

Charles Reed, also known as Charles Stevens and Homer Reed, was found guilty this afternoon by a jury of criminal attack on Flossie Morse, 13 years old, and was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

The child, who is Reed's niece by marriage, was brought here by him from Bradford, N. Y., and Reed kept her at a rooming house at 818 Market street, representing her as his daughter. He was arrested there Aug. 1, 1921. The child testified that Reed kept her with him by threats. Reed is 35 years old. He denied the charge.

SUIT AGAINST KLAN RULED OUT

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 7.—Judge Bell today sustained the demurrer entered yesterday to the petition of Harry B. Terrell and others for appointment of a receiver of the Ku Klux Klan. He signed a supersedeas, however, allowing the petitioners 20 days in which to take the case to the Supreme Court, and ruled that Imperial Wizard Simmons could continue drawing his salary pending the appeal.

The petition of Terrell and his associates was based on charges that the klan was bankrupt and that when they sought to have an investigation made of its affairs they were dismissed from the organization.

SALOON KEEPER ACQUITTED

Marcello Miramonte, proprietor of a soft-drink place at 533 South Ewing avenue, charged with having liquor in his possession, testified in the Court of Criminal Correction today that he was moving some beer cases in a rear room when he found a bottle of whisky and was standing there with it in his hand looking at it when a policeman came in and arrested him. The jury believed him and found him not guilty.

NOT TO RENEW ARMS EMBARGO

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The American Government will not re-establish at this time the embargo on the exportation of arms or munitions from the United States to Mexico, which was terminated by the joint resolution of Congress, approved Jan. 31, 1922, it was announced today at the State Department.

KENNEDY TELEGRAM TO MRS. OBENCHAIN READ

Offered in Effort to Show Slain Broker Sought Her; That She Was Not "Woman Scorned."

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 7.—A telegram from J. Belton Kennedy, broker, with whose murder Mrs. Madlynne Connor Obenchain is charged, addressed to Mrs. Obenchain at a Chicago hotel and dated June 7 last year, was offered in evidence by the defense today in Mrs. Obenchain's trial. It was stiplated by the prosecution that the telegram was in Kennedy's handwriting. The text was as follows:

"ESerious here tonight. Wait untily you hear from me before leaving for San Francisco. Duke."

Refutation of contention by the prosectuion that Mrs. Obenchain was a "woman scorned" and establishment that Kennedy had been seeking her instead of she pursuing him, was the purpose of the defense it was argued by attorneys for Mrs. Obenchain in support of testimony to which the prosecituon objected.

Miss Louise Wilson, proprietor of a beauty parlor here, testified that as a confidante of Mrs. Obenchain she exchanged messages between the defendant and Kennedy and that Kennedy had sought her to obtain Mrs. Obenchain's consent to a secret marriage which she declined to help him bring about.

Miss Wilson also testified that Mrs. J. D. Kennedy, mother of the slain broker, had visited her and sought to obtain her aid to prevent her son from marrying Mrs. Obenchain.

Mrs. Bessie Wiedoft, one of the first witnesses called by the defense, testified yesterday that she had lived in a flat in the same building with Mrs. Obnchain, then Miss Madalynne Connor, here in 1918, and that Kennedy called frequently on Miss Cornor.

Mrs. Wiedoft also told of having attended the wedding of the defendant to Ralph R. Obenchain, Chicago attorney, in 1919, and of incidents after Mrs. Obenchain's return here in 1921, following her divorce of Obenchain.

Recognized His Voice.

Telling of the marriage the witness said:

"The marriage took place at 8 o'clock in the evening and I and some of the other guests remained until 11. During the evening the telephone rang three times and I answered it twice. Both times I recognized Mr. Kennedy's voice. He asked for Madalynne. I told him she was ill. The third time Madalynne told me to take the receiver off the hook, but not to answer, and I did so."

Mrs. Wiedoft also testified that in January, 1921, Mrs. Obenchain, who had got a divorce in Chicago, came to Los Angeles and took an apartment in the same neighborhood as one occupied by the witness. Mrs. Wiedoft said Mrs. Obenchain "wanted to be near me." The prosecution had sought to establish that Mrs. Obenchain took this apartment because Kennedy lived a few blocks away.

VAN BLARCOM RATIONAL, WITNESSES DECLARE

Attorney and Alienist Testify Heir to $400,000 Estate Has Recovered Mentally.

Testimony in the suit to declare Frederick Van Blarcom, 26 years old, son of the late J. C. Van Blarcom, president of the Bank of Commerce, of sound mind, was resumed today before a jury in Circuit Judge Davis' court.

It is the third trial since last December, when Probate Judge Holtcamp denied the petition. In January a jury in the Probate Court affirmed the decision of the Probate Judge, whereupon an appeal for Van Blarcom was taken to the Circuit Court. This is the first case of the kind in the latter court since the Legislature last year authorized appeals from the Probate Court in such cases. At the outset yesterday Judge Davis overruled a motion to dismiss the appeal.

Evidence at the present trial is practically the same as in previous hearings. Van Blarcom was on the stand for several hours yesterday. He said he has been mentally restored and that he is able to handle his income without intervention of a guardian. He is the sole heir of the $400,000 estate of his mother, which was left in trust. The net income amounts to $15,000 a year. He has been receiving $700 a month, it was stated. He, at present, is a patient at the city sanitarium, but is not under restraint, being allowed to go and come at will by the superintendent, Dr. George A. Johns.

Attorney Is Witness.

A new witness for Van Blarcom was Robert E. Moloney, an attorney, who filed the information which resulted in a Probate Court jury adjudging Van Blarcom of unsound mind April 14, 1920. Moloney testified that he filed the information at the request of the defendant's mother, the late Mrs. Mary Van Blarcom.

"It is my opinion now," the attorney said, "that Van Blarcom has been restored and is competent to manage his property. I have seen him frequently in the last few months and conversed with him. He discussed current topics in a rational manner and showed a very good memory."

Moloney said he drew Mrs. Van Blarcom's will in which the income was bequeathed to Frederick after payment of $100 a month to a negro servant. Washington University is to get the estate if Frederick dies childless. He is not married and cannot legally contract a marriage during guardianship without consent of the guardian.

Two Alienists Testify.

Two alienists, Dr. Marc Ray Hughes and Dr. Theodore Romeiser, testified that the defendant, in their opinion, has mentally recovered.

Dr. Hughes said he put Frederick under a mental test and that he passed 100 per cent. The test consists of folding a sheet of paper and cutting off the corner at the center of the fold. The patient is supposed to be able to say what kind of a figure will be made in the sheet by clipping off the corner. Dr. Hughes, on cross-examination, admitted that he has presented a claim for $500 against Van Blarcom for services in making examinations and giving similar testimony at previous hearings.

Dr. Romeiser testified that he did not believe that a present physical ailment, with which Van Blarcom is said to be afflicted, affects him mentally.

The St. Louis Union Trust Co., guardian, is resisting the proceedings, which were filed by Van Blarcom's physician, Dr. Jerome D. Potts.

INGROWN NAILS

Toe Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen the Skin

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

ARBUCKLE WITNESSES ACCUSED OF PERJURY

Two Women Who Testified for Defense Indicted; One Told of Miss Rappe Being Ill.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 7.—Mrs. Minnie Neighbors of Los Angeles and Mrs. Frances S. Bates of Chicago, who testified for the defense in the trials of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle, were indicted on perjury charges early this morning by the county grand jury.

Mrs. Neighbors testified at Arbuckle's trial that she saw Miss Virginia Rappe, in connection with whose death Arbuckle is accused of manslaughter, at Wheeler Hot Springs, Ventura County, Cal., in August, 1921, and that Miss Rappe had suffered two sick spells while at the Hot Springs.

District Attorney Matthew Brady, after the grand jury session, said he had presented evidence to prove Miss Rappe was not at the springs at the time stated by Mrs. Neighbors.

"I doubt if Miss Rappe ever was at this Hot Springs," said Brady.

Mrs. Bates testified at the second trial of Arbuckle. She said she worked with Miss Rappe in a Chicago department store in 1913, where the film actress had been employed as a model.

Brady said he furnished the grand jury with records from the Chicago store to show that Mrs. Bates worked at the establishment in 1909, was discharged in 1910 and had not been re-employed by the store.

MAN KILLED IN PISTOL FIGHT

"I Had to Do It to Live," Slayer Says After Surrender.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 7.—Earl Hensley, Mexia, auto accessory dealer and owner of a hotel, was shot and killed in a pistol fight in the business district here late yesterday. Maurice Champ, said to have been a former business associate of Hensley, surrendered to county officers immediately after the shooting and was charged with murder.

"I had to do it to live," Champ declared, according to officers. He was released on $10,000 bond.

Fire Destroys Plattsburg Barracks.

By the Associated Press.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., March 7.—Eight long wooden buildings at the Plattsburg baracks used for quarmasters' supplies were destroyed by fire early today. Army officers declined to estimate the loss, but it was known that it would be many thousands of dollars.

Pimples and boils
—caused by errors of diet

A well-known skin specialist says that pimples are "signal flags of danger" often indicating errors in diet.

Indeed pimples are so frequently associated with faulty habits of eating and improper digestion that the first thing to do is to see that our food is right.

Fresh yeast is a wonderful corrective food for these skin disorders. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in the elements which improve appetite and digestion and which keep the intestines clean of poisons.

Physicians and hospitals all over the country are recommending Fleischmann's fresh yeast for pimples and boils. It gets right at the basic cause of these complaints.

Eat 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's fresh yeast daily before or between meals to keep your skin healthy. Be sure it's Fleischmann's Yeast—the familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label. Place a standing order with your grocer.

$150,000 STOLEN FROM PENNSYLVANIA U. FUND

Assistant Treasurer Sought by the Police in Connection With the Case.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—Bonds and other negotiable securities valued at more than $150,000 have been stolen from the strong box of the Dr. Thomas W. Evans Dental School and Museum fund of the University of Pennsylvania, it became known last night. Walter A. Unger, assistant treasurer of the fund, is being sought by the police in connection with the case.

It was discovered, members of the committee said, that Unger had taken $12,000 belonging to the fund on the preceding day, saying that it was for the payroll of the dental school and museum. The money did not reach either the school or museum, it was stated.

DOG GUARDS OWNER'S BODY

Foul Play Indicated by Discovery in Oklahoma Thicket.

By the Associated Press.

BARTLESVILLE, Ok., March 7.—A searching party found the body of Harold Salley, 21, of Glen Oak, today in a thicket near a country schoolhouse. He had been absent from home eight days. The body was guarded by Salley's dog, which at first refused to permit the searchers to approach. A severe bruise was found on the dead man's head.

According to Sheriff Henderson, who headed the searching party, Salley apparently had been dead about six days. The damp ground around the body was trampled smooth by the dog, which was almost dead from starvation, apparently having remained constantly with his master's body.

JUDGE DRAWS FINE LINE IN LIQUOR SEIZURES

"Degree of Visibility" Restores Bottles to Saloon Man While Glasses Are Retained.

The line between legal and illegal seizure of liquor was finely drawn by Judge Faris in the United States District Court yesterday afternoon, when he restored to Otto Richter, a saloon keeper at 504 Market street, five quarts of whisky as having been seized without a search warrant, and retained two glasses partly filled with liquor which, he held, were seized without the necessity of a search warrant because they were in view.

The fine point was the degree of the visibility of the glasses. They could not be seen from the front of the bar, but the policeman who found them testified that as he rounded the end of the bar and before he got behind the bar he could see the drain board under the bar and there were the two glasses, sitting side by side.

Richter's lawyer argued that the finding of the glasses involved search without a warrant. Judge Faris held that it did not.

In deciding the point, he said: "I have gone as far in these cases as I care to go. I have gone as far as the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit went in the Berry case. I am not disposed to go farther unless the Court of Appeals in this district does so."

The case concerning the five bottles was simpler. They did not become visible until search had been made in the suit case in which they were concealed. So they were returned.

Man Killed by Train in County.

A man, identified thus far only as "Frank," formerly employed as a section hand, was killed by a Missouri, Kansas & Texas freight train at Prospect Hill, St. Louis County, at 1 p. m. yesterday. He had stepped from the path of a westbound freight train and was run down by an eastbound train. Residents of the neighborhood reported that a short time before the accident the man was seen on top of a coal car which had been switched onto a siding. He appeared to be removing some of the coal, they said.

KIDNAPED GIRL READY TO WED

Bertha Sciacco Agrees to Marry Alleged Abductor Today.

Girilonio Sgroe, 33 years old, 1331 Blair avenue, who was wanted by the police for kidnaping Bertha Sciacco, 18 years old, from her home at 802A North Ninth street, Friday, went yesterday afternoon to the Carr street station, where Bertha was held in the matron's room, and announced that he wanted to marry her.

The girl was brought out and said she was willing. Her parents were consulted and said they were willing. The Circuit Attorney was asked how he felt about it and he said he was willing. So a license was obtained and the wedding was set for today.

Sgroe said the girl was willing all along to marry him, but her parents objected, so the kidnaping was arranged to overcome their objections.

NO CLEW TO WRITER OF LETTER IN RICHWINE CASE

Detectives Unable to Determine Whether Note Purporting to Be From Murderer is Genuine.

Detectives who have been investigating an anonymous letter purporting to have been written by the murderer of Mrs. Clara Richwine and her father-in-law, William Richwine, in their home at 460 North Fifty-first street, near East St. Louis, Jan. 9, have been unable to find the writer or to determine whether the information is of value.

The letter, dated Jan. 17, received by Charles A. Karch, one of the attorneys of Dr. R. X. McCracken, charged with the crime, stated that the writer, calling himself "Duke," called on Mrs. Richwine by appointment and found her mopping the floor in the basement and remained in the house an hour, but gave no information as to what happened while he was there. He gave a route which he wrote that he followed in returning to St. Louis.

The letter was turned over to the grand jury by a private detective when he appeared as a witness and is now a part of the records of the case.

FRADY REMOVED TO JAIL AS RESULT OF KIDNAPING "TIP"

By the Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla., March 7.—Acting on a "tip" that Edgar C. Frady, Chicago automobile dealer, who shot and killed his wife here a week ago, was to be kidnaped from the hospital where he is recuperating from self-inflicted wounds, and taken to Cuba aboard a yacht, waiting outside the harbor, Sheriff Allen yesterday had Frady ordered to the county jail and a special guard placed about the building.

The Sheriff received information, he said, that Chicago gunmen had been imported and that the plan only waited nightfall to be put into operation. No charges, however, thus far have been preferred by the Sheriff.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and, above all, take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism, get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

R. G. FITZSIMMONS WRONGLY NAMED IN DESERTERS' LIST

East St. Louis Man, Erroneously Classified by War Department, Enlisted in 1917.

Louis Boismenue, who was chairman of the War Registration Board in Division No. 3, East St. Louis, yesterday received a communication from Major-General George Bell Jr. of the Adjutant-General's office, informing him that the name of Robert G. Fitzsimmons, who registered for the draft while residing at 529 Veronica avenue, East St. Louis, and whose name appeared in the list of "deserters" furnished by the War Department, and printed in the Post-Dispatch Jan. 13 last, has been removed from the list.

The communication states that the war records show that Fitzsimmons enlisted for service in the World War on June 4, 1917, giving his address as Kirkwood, Mo., and that he was in war service until May 12, 1919, when he was discharged.

The communication states that the reason his service was not discovered in time to eliminate his name from the "deserter" list was because of the different addresses given. The letter does not state in what branch of the service Fitzsimmons enlisted.

Blankets still as soft and fleecy as the day you first tucked them in

YOU had had one pair ruined. Cake soap—rubbing—and your handsome blankets returned to you matted and shrunken—their softness and fleeciness gone.

They could not stand the old stern methods. Wool is more sensitive than any other fabric, and requires more careful laundering. Even the suds from a harsh soap or harsh soap flake will make its delicate scale-like fibres tangle and shrink.

With Lux you need not hesitate to wash your soft, fleecy blankets at the first sign of dinginess.

The creamy, satiny Lux flakes whisk into a thick lather. There is no rubbing to shrink and mat the tiny fibres—not one bit of solid soap to stick to the soft wool and yellow it. Your blankets come from their Lux bath as big and soft as when you put them in.

Your grocer, druggist, or department store has Lux. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

SUPREME COURT RULING CAUSES INDICTMENT TO BE DISMISSED

Joseph Fleischman Freed of Charge of Receiving Stolen Property on Grounds of Insufficient Evidence.

An indictment charging burglary, larceny and receiving stolen property against Joseph Fleischman, 1207 North Thirteenth street, was nolle prossed in the Circuit Court yesterday, following a ruling by the Supreme Court that there was not sufficient evidence in the case.

Fleischman was convicted of the count alleging the receipt of stolen property by a jury, Oct. 23, 1919, and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. The Supreme Court reversed the decision and remanded the case for a new trial, on the ground that the evidence did not justify the jury's verdict.

Reduce Your Fat Without Dieting

Years ago the formula for fat reduction was "diet"—"exercise." Today it is "Take Marmola Prescription Tablets." Friends tell friends—these friends tell others. They eat substantial food, live as they like and still reduce steadily and easily without going through long siege of tiresome exercise and starvation diet. Marmola Tablets are sold by all druggists the world over at one dollar for a case, or if you prefer you can order direct from the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Av., Detroit, Mich.

J. W. GUION TAKEN IN STOLEN AUTO

Detective Says He Was Trying to Start Coupe With "Jumper" on Locked Switch.

J. Walker Guion, whose wife, Mrs. Irene Sanford-Behr-Von-Schrader-Leschinsky-Guion, is suing him for divorce, was driving a new Hudson coupe along Grand avenue, near Lucas avenue, at 8:30 last night, when Mrs. P. A. Skelton, 3253 Copelin avenue, stepped into the street and signaled him to stop.

"Where are you going with my car?" she demanded, as Guion pulled up to the curb.

"We are on our way to Police Headquarters," said a man occupying the seat with Guion. "I am Detective Sergeant Kemp, and I had a hunch this car had been stolen."

It was then disclosed that Kemp and another detective had observed Guion trying to start the coupe in front of a skating rink on Enright avenue, just west of Grand avenue. A wire "jumper" had been used to provide ignition, the owner having locked the switch. Kemp arrested Guion and another young man who was seen walking away from the coupe when the detectives approached.

Mrs. Skelton said she had parked her car on the east side of Grand avenue, near Lucas avenue, at 7 p. m., and had gone to a nearby motion picture theater. The coupe was turned over to her and Guion and the other man were taken to Police Headquarters.

More Trouble for Guion.

But Guion's troubles did not end with his arrest in connection with the theft of the coupe. Frank J. complained to detectives today that he purchased a Ford automobile a year ago from Guoin and later learned that it was mortgaged. Guion said that was true but that he had taken up most of the notes due on the car.

He insisted, however, that he was not trying to steal Mrs. Skelton's coupe last night. He said he was standing in the doorway of the skating rink when a man wearing a derby hat asked him if he knew how to start a Hudson. He said he got into the coupe and the man with the derby departed.

Guion, who is 24 years old and resides with his mother at 4619 Labadie avenue, said that he met his wife downtown at noon yesterday and discussed with her the details of her pending divorce suit. He is her fourth husband. She is wealthy.

UTH ACCUSED OF HOLDUP

mes Hennessey Identified by Victim of $4000 East Side Robbery.

James "Sticky" Hennessey, 19 ars old, of 1908 St. Clair avenue, ast St. Louis, arrested Sunday in St. ouis on suspicion of having been implicated in robbing Louis Cool of Granite City of $4000 on Feb. 23, was identified yesterday by Cool. A warrant charging highway robbery was issued at Granite City, but Hennessey refused to go to Illinois without extradition papers.

Cool, proprietor of a boarding house and saloon, had drawn $7800 from a bank to cash pay checks, when some men jumped from an automobile and took from him $4000 in packages which he carried inside his shirt. They overlooked the other $3800. They escaped in the automobile, which was driven by a woman.

Have You Ever Had a Swollen Face?

YOU wondered what caused the ulcerated tooth. And how you looked forward to the day when that swollen appearance would disappear and you would again be presentable to your family and friends!

Even when the irritation affects the gums only, or the teeth are slightly sensitive, you have a most uncomfortable mouth, which in turn gives your face a haggard, worried expression.

Would it not have been better had you regarded the old adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure?"

Why Kolynos is used by Thousands of Professional Men

If you keep your whole mouth in the best possible hygienic condition — the danger of a swollen face, sensitive teeth and sore gums is reduced to a minimum. Take better personal care of your mouth by brushing your gums and teeth with a dentifrice which not only removes the film from the teeth but renders powerless and eliminates hundreds of millions of enamel-destroying bacteria.

Teeth and gums cannot possibly remain healthy in the incubating temperature of a mouth in which particles of starchy food are permitted to ferment and feed the multiplying bacteria. That is why 124,000 American dentists and physicians have asked us to send them for distribution to their patients Kolynos, the scientific, germicidal dental cream.

Before You Got Your Ulcerated Tooth

Would it not have been better if you had been consulting your dentist at least twice a year? He would have given you the benefit of his scientific knowledge and probably been able to prevent this condition, with its pain and facial disfiguration. Failure to do this frequently means the loss of a tooth, and permanent detriment to the facial expression.

Grit Cannot Help

Kolynos is commended by leaders in dental and medical science for the very important additional reason that it polishes the teeth to their natural pearly lustre, without the use of even a trace of grit.

The use of grit cannot aid, even to the smallest degree, in killing the destroying bacteria. On the contrary, it scores and grooves the enamel, thus making it a much more easy prey to the attacking germs. Has grit been doing this deadly damage to your teeth?

Make one test of Kolynos Dental Cream for your own satisfaction — and admit that your mouth feels cleaner than ever before. Why? Because it is hygienically clean!

The Kolynos Company
New Haven Conn. U.S.A.

We have on file in our New Haven laboratories personal applications from over 47,000 American Dentists and 74,000 American Physicians for Kolynos to distribute among their patients.

CAPITAL'S 'BEST MINDS' IN MIDST OF CONTROVERSY

United States Constitution Subject at Issue in Problem of Executive Appointments.

FUNDING COMMISSION MEMBERS IN DOUBT

Attorney-General Hands in a "Curbstone" Opinion to President but Hasn't Convinced Senators.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922.)

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Sometimes the American Constitution is changed by amendment and sometimes its meaning is developed by legal interpretation.

President Harding and the Senate are in the midst of a controversy which may result in an unwritten amendment to the Constitution and may vitally affect the constitutional system in the future.

A subcommittee of United States Senators has just ruled that President Harding's appointees to the Allied Funding Commission, namely, Senator Smoot of Utah and Representative Burton of Ohio, are ineligible to hold office on that commission because of a constitutional provision which reads as follows:

"No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

The subcommittee holds that the appointment of Senator Smoot and Representative Burton is to a "civil office," which has been created during the term for which they were elected.

Legal Opinions Being Quoted.

Legal opinions galore are being quoted on both sides of the question and when Attorney-General Daugherty went to the Cabinet meeting today he gave what he termed a "curbstone opinion" to the effect that he believed the office was one which hardly could come within the meaning of the Constitution, since the action of the Funding Commission would after all be the action of the President. He admitted, however, that the fact that both Smoot and Burton were named for offices which by act of Congress required confirmation by the Senate did give the impression of a civil office, though it probably differed from what the framers of the Constitution had in mind.

Senator Brandegee of Connecticut, Republican, joined with Senator Walsh of Montana, Democrat, and Senator Overman of North Carolina, Democrat, in the subcommittee report which held Messrs. Smoot and Burton ineligible, while Senators Cummins of Iowa and Sterling of South Dakota, both Republicans, took the other view.

Came Up in McKinley Term.

This is not a new question. It came up during McKinley's administration when Senator Hoar, Republican, argued that McKinley was wrong in appointing members of the Senate to negotiate a treaty. It was believed at the time that the occasion was a special one and that it would not become a precedent. But, instead, the McKinley action has been taken as justification for the appointment of Senators Lodge and Underwood to the Executive Commission which negotiated the treaties at the arms conference. There was a dispute at the time as to whether Mr. Harding was violating the Constitution, but it was insisted that, since the members of the commission didn't require confirmation by the Senate and didn't receive any pay, they hardly could be called Ambassadors. They occupied the status of senatorial advisers by virtue of the fact that the advice of the Senate was considered by Mr. Harding as a treaty-making function.

Now, however, the desire of Mr. Harding still further to please Congress by giving the legislative branch of the Government a voice in the negotiations whereby payments on the allied war debt interest and principal are to be arranged, has developed an unforeseen conflict of opinion. It is devoid of party or personal feeling, however, and revolves entirely upon the question of whether the American constitutional system will permit close co-operation between the executive and legislative branches, or whether an absolute separation was intended by the fathers of the republic.

It is not unrelated, either, to the discussion which has been developing ever since the war, that the Executive should be more closely responsible to the electorate during his term.

Opposition Argument.

The opposition to the appointment of Senators and Representatives on commissions which are directly managed by the President of the United States is that Congress surrenders its independence to the chief executive without being able to secure the recall of the President as a foreign parliamentary body would check its Prime Minister or Premier.

The agitation for the giving of seats in Congress to Cabinet Ministers has hinged upon the same thing for, unless the executive and the Cabinet are responsible to the electorate at more frequent intervals than every four years, the tendency of most constitutional authorities is to insist upon the absolute independence of Congress from the influence, direct or indirect, of the President, whether he is the real or nominal party leader.

Should the subcommittee's report be ignored by the Senate itself, there is a strong probability that members of the Senate and House will serve more often hereafter on executive commissions, and particularly in the negotiation of treaties. Incidentally State Department authorities under the last administration, in response to an inquiry by President Wilson as to whether he should take any members of the Senate to the Versailles peace conference, ruled that inasmuch as Senators were to pass in judgment upon the treaties made, it would be a violation of the spirit of the Constitution to have them under the influence or authority of the President at any time.

FORMER DRY LAW HEAD IN STATE FOR SPEECHES

John F. Kramer Will Tour Missouri in Antisaloon League Enforcement Campaign.

John F. Kramer, former national prohibition commissioner, passed through St. Louis today on his way to Flat River, Mo., to begin a State-wide speaking tour in the interest of the enforcement of the prohibition laws, under the auspices of the Missouri Antisaloon League. He declared in an interview that there are plenty of agents under various authorities now to enforce prohibition, if the authorities will co-operate. Generally speaking, he explained, the matter of enforcement rests with Federal agents alone at present.

Indiana Tax Commission Member Explains Work of Body Which Has Resulted in Lower Tax Rate

W. A. Hough, Addressing Bar Association Here, Declares Power to Regulate Bond Issues Also Brings Lower Bids From Contractors.

The St. Louis Bar Association, which is advocating the creation by the new Constitution of a State tax commission with adequate powers to equalize taxes between the various classes of property and the different towns, counties and cities, was addressed last night at the University Club by William A. Hough, member of the State Board of Tax Commissioners of Indiana, on the operation of the commission of that state.

The Indiana commission is a statutory body and consists of three members and has authority to regulate all taxation as well as public bond issues. It is an appellate body, and its decisions on all matters pertaining to tax levies and bond issues are final.

In 1919 Indiana passed a law providing that all property shall be assessed at its full cash value and empowered its tax commission to regulate public bond issues and act as an appellate body on appeals from assessments made by township trustees. The commission also was empowered to assess directly banks, trust companies and the public utilities throughout the State, removing this authority from the township trustees.

Tax Valuation of Six Billions.

Indiana has a tax valuation of six billion dollars and a rate of 24 cents per $100 of valuation. When the new law was passed real estate was paying 69 per cent of the taxes and other property 31 per cent. Everything was reassessed on the basis of its true cash value, the value of real estate now ranging from $12 to $199 an acre, and the tax valuations have been more than doubled by the rulings of the commission, with the result that the tax rate has been substantially reduced.

In the regulation of bond issues, Hough explained, four points are taken into consideration before any issue is authorized. These points are: 1. The necessity for the improvement. 2. Ability to pay. 3. The sentiment of the people towards the issue. 4. The cost of the improvement.

Regardless of the first three points, Hough said, the commission never authorizes a bond issue for an improvement where it is believed the cost would be exorbitant, and the result has been, he pointed out, that Indiana has taught contractors to submit fair bids.

Contractors Opposed Law.

"The road and building contractors," he said, "were opposed to this law, and a howl was sent up by these interests whenever the board refused to authorize a bond issue where, in its judgment, the improvement was not deemed necessary.

"The Legislature in 1920 repealed that part of the law empowering the commission to decrease levies, and in the following three months $30,000,000 in road bonds was issued, some of the work being bid as high as $50,000 a mile, while the same roads were being built in other places at as low as $22,000 a mile. In 1921 the law was again repealed to correct these abuses, with the result that the commission was reinvested with power to regulate levies and bond issues."

$10,000,000 Spent on Schools.

He cited several instances of how the commission operated to save money. Indianapolis, he said, expended $10,000,000 in the last two years on school buildings, many of which contained "expensive frills and furbelows." A school for negroes, costing $750,000 and containing exhibitions of model kitchens, dining and bedrooms, so the children could see how homes should be kept, but the result was a large expenditure and the creation of discontent in the children with their own homes which suffered by comparison with the models on exhibition.

One building was erected by the School Board at a cost of $548,000 that did not contain a school room, although schools were needed, there being about 5000 pupils on half time in school due to crowded conditions, and about 4500 in portable schools. This building contained only gymnasium, swimming pool, cafeteria and other recreational features. It actually fell down, he said.

Held Bids Were Too High.

Last year, he said, Lawrence County wanted to issue $182,000 in bonds for a school, but was dissuaded by the commission, which held that the bids for the school were too high. The result was that the same school was later built for $115,000. Allen County took bids on a school, the lowest of which was $81,888, and wanted a bond issue. The commission refused a permit until the contractors decided the school could be built for $49,500.

Hancock, Rush and Shelby counties are the three richest counties in Indiana, Hough said, and the commission found that land in Hancock was assessed at $195 an acre; in Rush at $200 and in Shelby at $91. The result was a substantial raise for Shelby County.

The commission, he said, cut $600,000 out of the budget of Indianapolis, all of which would have been spent, and one city of 58,000 inhabitants was denied 17 automobiles for its officials. He said Missouri also should have a tax commission with power to restrain its public officers from unnecessary expenditures.

In closing he said many states were on the verge of bankruptcy owing to the ever widening margin of tax-exempt property, which was creating an insufferable burden on the taxpayer, his own State having about $1,000,000,000 of exempted property that should be taxed, and the disposition to exempt property from taxation, he declared, demanded the immediate attention of the people throughout the country.

PRESIDENT STOPS ARMS SHIPMENTS TO CHINA

Proclamation Is Based on Joint Resolution Approved by Congress on Jan. 31 Last.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Shipments from the United States of arms or munitions of war to China was prohibited by President Harding yesterday in an official proclamation.

The proclamation was issued in accordance with a joint resolution approved Jan. 31, 1922, by Congress, which provided "that whenever the President finds that in any American country, or in any country in which the United States exercises extraterritorial jurisdiction, conditions of domestic violence exist, which are or may be promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States and makes proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export, except under such limitations and exceptions as the President prescribes, any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or Congress."

The proclamation states that it is provided by the joint resolution that whoever exports any arms or munitions of war in violation of the proclamation shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding $10,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both.

"I do hereby warn them that all violations of such provisions will be rigorously prosecuted," it continues.

Power of prescribing exceptions and limitations to the application of the resolution by Congress were delegated by the President to the Secretary of State.

FORD WILLING TO GUARANTEE OFFER FOR THE SHOALS

Representative Tells House Military Committee That $10,000,000 Capitalization Would Be Effected.

SAFEGUARD ASKED FOR BY SECRETARY WEEKS

Agreement to Make Commercial Fertilizers Will Also Be Included in Contract, It Is Said.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—W. B. Mayo, representing Henry Ford, described to the House Military Committee today the alterations which he recently announced Ford had agreed to make in his proposal for purchase and lease of the Government power and nitrate projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

One of these contemplated insertion of a clause fixing a paid capitalization "of not less than $10,000,000" for the company Ford would create to operate Muscle Shoals. Inclusion of such a provision in the terms of the offer was recommended by Secretary Weeks when he sent it to Congress, in order that the Government's interest might be safeguarded against possible failure of the company to execute the contract in good faith.

Guarantee on Fertilizers.

The second alteration presented by Ford's spokesman involved the inclusion of a definite guarantee for the company to manufacture "commercial fertilizers." The original proposal only bound the company to manufacture "nitrogen and other fertilizer compounds."

The witness said Ford had not agreed to reduce the lease period for the Muscle Shoals properties from 100 to 50 years.

"Then," said Representative Greene, Republican, Vermont, "we understand he stands pat on that."

The Vermont member said the proposal would "hog-tie" the Government" and compel it to subsidize the Ford interests against all other private capital. "It will simply make trouble on the House floor when the offer is presented there for consideration," he said.

Urges 50-Year Clause.

Greene said acceptance of the 100-year clause would bind our children's children's children to conditions Ford's company might impose. He strongly opposed changing the public policy limiting leases of power rights to 50 years and declared no exception should be made in this case.

A resolution authorizing an appropriation of $2000 to defray expenses of members of the Military Committee who will visit the projects at the Shoals was introduced today in the House by Chairman Kahn.

The committee also received informally copies of a new proposal which was submitted at the War Department by Thomas Hampton, a contractor of Washington, D. C.

Engineer Attacks Offers.

J. E. Levering, a civil engineer, of Los Angeles, attacked the offers before the committee, including those of Henry Ford, the Alabama Power Co. and Engstrum, which, he declared, failed to rise to the dignity of "contracts," but more nearly resembled "well-worded handouts." He has been associated with Engstrum, Levering said, but "walked out" when that proposal was modified.

Chairman Kahn conferred with Secretary Mellon on the financial phase of Muscle Shoals development. Kahn said he expected Mellon would testify before the committee concluded its hearings and that Attorney-General Daugherty also would appear to give his opinions on the legal complications existing between the War Department and private companies who claim option rights on certain of the shoal units.

PENITENTIARY NOW SELLING PRODUCTS IN OPEN MARKET

For First Time in Years, None of Output of Missouri Penal Institution Is on Contract Basis.

LABOR OF CONVICTS WAS ONCE "LET OUT"

Superintendents of Prison Factories Formerly Were Employes of Private Bidders for Work.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 7.—For the first time in many years, none of the output of the Missouri penitentiary is on a contract basis, but all is being sold in the open market. This complete change in the manufacturing system in use at the prison has been put into effect within the last month by George W. Wagner, Supervisor of Industries and one of the Commissioners of Penal Institutions.

Wagner now has three salesmen out, and expects to make in the prison factories and sell this year 120,000 dozen shirts, 200,000 to 225,000 dozen overalls, trousers and jackets, 200,000 pairs of shoes and 300,000 pounds of binder twine. In addition, there will be a large number of brooms and miscellaneous odds and ends of leather pieces for use in upholstery and similar industries. About 1500 men are employed in the six factories in operation within the walls, and some work is done also by the 90 women convicts, who aid in clothing manufacture.

Labor Once Was Bid For.

For many years the State did not own the factories within the walls of the prison. The buildings belonged to the State, but the machinery and other equipment in use was the property of manufacturers known as prison contractors. These men were makers of saddletrees, harness, shoes, overalls, shirts and like articles, who, in competitive bidding, had offered the State the highest rate of any per day for the labor of convicts in these factories.

The prison contractors ran their own affairs independently of the State in every respect, except that, instead of paying daily wages to the men who did the work, a certain stipulated sum was paid to the State for the services of each man.

The superintendents of all of the factories and their assistants were employes of the contractors, although State employed guards were on duty in each factory. The whipping post was in use then and at times convicts were lashed for short work or for defective work which was regarded as malicious. Numerous large fortunes grew out of this system, and during the administration of Gov. Major the legislature enacted a law abolishing the contract system.

The penitentiary did not have sufficient funds, however, to deal in materials on a scale commensurate with the needs of its factories, so numerous arrangements were made with large buyers of prison made products, on what is known as a "cut-make and trim" basis. Under these contracts the firms supplied material to the prison, which was manufactured into finished product and turned over to the owner of the materials, the State receiving a stipulated price per dozen for having manufactured the articles in question.

New System Defended.

Arguments in behalf of this system, as opposed to the older form of contract arrangement, was that under the "cut-make-and-trim" regime, tasks and the discipline of convicts in the factories was completely in the hands of employes of the State, rather than in the hands of employes of private contractors whose greed for profits might in some instances result in undue driving and oppression.

Wagner, however, has decided to do away with all of the contracts, and as these instruments all expired during February, his plan now is on trial. The new arrangement will enable the State to make the profits which previously went to the brokers and jobbers for whom the prison factories manufactured goods. It also means, however, that the State is in the material market on its own hook, must take its chances with rising and falling raw material levels and must carry on hand a reasonably large stock of manufactured goods to meet the varying flow of orders.

Wagner's selling force is working altogether on commission, and, despite the sluggish condition of business is making some progress in competition with the firms which formerly were customers of the prison factories.

Office Built Within Walls.

A little stone building, of the same general lines and appearance as the modern cell buildings, has been erected within the walls to house the office of the supervisor of industries and his force, which now consists of a complete set of auditors, accountants, cost experts and manufacturing advisors, besides 15 or 20 convicts who act as typists and bookkeepers.

The industries have had to take a loss of about $40,000, due to a large batch of shirts having been turned back to the prison. These garments, according to Wagner, were manufactured under the direction of Henry Miller, former superintendent of the prison shirt factory, who left the prison about the time a recent audit of that factory began. These shirts were rejected, according to Wagner, because various parts of them were mismatched.

LLOYD GEORGE TO HOLD OFFICE UNTIL THE GENOA MEETING

Generally Believed Premier Will Remain to See Irish Legislation Completed.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 7.—Prime Minister Lloyd George has deferred his resignation without giving his colleagues any pledge as to future action regarding the premiership, according to the most reliable sources of information reaching the Associated Press today.

It is commonly accepted that he will retain leadership of the Government until Irish legislation has been completed, and possibly until the Genoa conference. He is credited with an earnest desire to go to Genoa, and will devote all his time to preparations for the trip during convalescence at his home in Wales.

Sir Arthur Balfour declared himself today a believer in the benefits of the coalition.

Indians in America Thank the Post-Dispatch for Merz Articles

To the Post-Dispatch.

THE people of India and all Americans who love the cause of human liberty, keenly feel the great service done by your paper by having such an able, critical and sympathetic observer as Mr. Charles Merz to interpret the causes and tendencies of unrest in India. We express our most sincere appreciation for the work. All India will remember Mr. Merz's concluding sentence of the last article: "A large company of India's restless masses struggle precariously toward something known as self-rule."

India, struggling to attain self-rule under the most precarious circumstances, owes a debt to American papers and the American public who have taken an interest in the cause of the struggle for freedom of one-fifth of the population of the world.

GENOA CONFERENCE IS SET FOR APRIL 10, WITH ITALY READY TO TAKE HER PART

England and Germany Said to Be Prepared to Work for Economic Rebuilding of Europe —Poincare May Represent France.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The attitude of the United States Government toward participation in the forthcoming Genoa economic conference has been formulated and will be announced shortly, it was learned at the White House today.

Officials at the White House said that the delay in announcing the position of the United States toward the conference had been occasioned by the absence of Secretary of State Hughes in Bermuda. Previous intimations by high officials have been to the effect that the United States could not participate at Genoa until the financial situation in Europe had been brought to a point where constructive discussions could take place.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 7.—April 10 has been definitely settled upon as the date for the opening of the Genoa economic conference. Italy, whence a request for delay had been expected owing to the extended Cabinet crisis last month, informd the Foreign Office yesterday that she would be ready on that date.

The French Government will have five representatives at the opening, one of whom is quite likely to be Premier Poincare.

The Italian note announcing readiness to proceed on April 10 caused mild surprise at the French Foreign Office, as it had been unofficially said that Italy would not be willing to enter the conference during Holy Week, regardless of whether she was ready, but the news is greeted with satisfaction, as it is realized that the problems to be discussed are momentous and imperative. It was officially stated that should a request for delay come from any quarter France would acquiesce after Great Britain had agreed, but would not indorse such request previous to its acceptance by Great Britain.

French to Be Ready Soon.

The French experts will be ready with their propositions in about two weeks, allowing a sufficient period for the Premier to study the various points with members of the delegation before they depart for Genoa.

The meeting of the Finance Ministers of France, Great Britain, Italy and Belgium on March 8 will be merely for the purpose of discussing the distribution among the allied Powers of the reparations payments already made by Germany.

The British and German Governments are understood here to have agreed unreservedly to stand back of their respective nationals, who share in raising the $100,000,000 destined for the economic restoration of Europe through the International Banking Consortium, recently organized in London.

The Italian Government is said to have given the same assurance with some reservations. France has not yet made known its decision, while the Belgian Government is reported to be adverse to making any guarantees to Belgian financiers who agreed to subscribe 20 per cent of the consortium's capital. The Belgian Government is said to have taken the view that the individual financiers, who in the future may reap the benefits from the resumption of trade in Central Europe and Russia, must assume the risks involved.

Belgium Changes Attitude.

Financial representatives from Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Germany met in London some time ago and decided to found the international consortium, to be capitalized at $100,000,000, 25 per cent of which was to be subscribed immediately. The four big Powers were to assume 90 per cent of the subscription and Belgium 10 per cent. Belgium then insisted that she be allowed to participate to the extent of 20 per cent, but, at a meeting of the Belgian Cabinet subsequently, it was practically decided that the firms and banks which subscribed to the consortium should not be guaranteed by the Government. This action is taken to mean that Belgium will be practicaly eliminated from the consortium.

French financial opinion is also reported to be opposed to Government backing for French financiers who participate in the undertaking.

EARLY IRISH ELECTIONS UNDER TREATY ACT

Spirited Debate in House of Commons Over Amendment of Bill; Ulstermen Walk Out.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, March 7.—Rioting in Hanover street this afternoon resulted in firing into a crowd by the military, killing two boys and wounding another. The Lord Mayor announced that the imposition of martial law was imminent.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 7.—A spirited debate in the House of Commons in the resumption of the discussion yesterday in committee stage of the Irish bill, during the course of which all the Ulster members walked out, was followed by acceptance of the operative provision of the bill giving the Anglo-Irish treaty force of law and the adoption of an amendment dissolving the Southern Parliament and providing for the holding of elections not later than four months after the passage of the act.

The withdrawal of the Ulster members came after vehement protests against the decision of the House to apply closure to the first subsection of clause one, which is the operative provision of the bill, closure eliminating 14 amendments. This action was voted 182 to 31, while the subsection was added by a further majority of two. The amendment moved by Sir Hamar Greenwood, relating to the dissolution of the Southern Parliament and the holding of elections, was adopted, 217 to 36.

Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary for the Colonies, who was in charge of the bill, declared that if no agreement was reached between Ulster and the Free State regarding the election of a Governor-General there should be a separate Governor-General for the North of Ireland.

First Draft of Irish Free State Constitution Completed.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, March 7.—The first draft of the Irish Constitution, which had been completed by a committee of which Darrell Figgis is acting chairman, was submitted today to the provisional Government for any changes that are deemed necessary.

The Constitution does not bind its people forever to the Irish Free State, and contains nothing forbidding them from continuing a struggle for complete independence, according to reliable sources.

The Constitution includes Northeast Ulster in the Free State. The six counties would retain the powers they now possess, having their own Legislatures, functioning similarly to the Legislatures of the Canadian provinces or the states in the United States, with certain restrictions.

OTHER CITIES STILL AHEAD OF US IN BUILDING

Contractors Do Not Expect St. Louis to Improve Relative Standing at Present Wages.

LITTLE CONSTRUCTION WORK BEING DONE

Monster Program Is Held Up Because of High Costs for Labor in This City.

While St. Louis was eighteenth among the cities with building permits exceeding $1,000,000 in 1921, having a total of $16,631,305 for the year, it shows a gain of more than 100 per cent for the first two months of this year, with a total for the two months of $2,405,265, as compared to $1,047,870 in the first two months of 1921.

This large increase would indicate at first glance that the industry was being rapidly revived here but builders take a contrary view. They point out that all save two of the cities that led St. Louis last year in total building permits are also showing increased activity this year, on a percentage in most cases exceeding the gain of this city, and they assert that unless wages in the building trades here are reduced to the level paid in other cities, St. Louis, which is holding up a monster building program because of high costs, will again finish at the bottom of the list in building construction this year.

Surveys Showed Delays.

It will be remembered that surveys made by the Post-Dispatch and Director of Public Welfare Cunliff last November disclosed building projects aggregating $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 being held back by high costs, chiefly of labor and material and that about half of this work would be started before April if wages were reduced 30 per cent from the prevailing peak war-time scale of $1.25 an hour, and material prices came down 15 per cent. The proposal was submitted to the labor unions, and in a referendum vote was overwhelmingly rejected. Since this vote, about 2500 painters, decorators, paper hangers and cement finishers have voluntarily reduced their wages 20 per cent, but the other trades are standing firm. Material prices have remained about steady since the first of this year, but are down 25 to 50 per cent from the high level attained in 1919.

While union leaders and representatives of the Master Builders' Association, composed of general contractors, have haggled over the wage question for about a year, the seasons have passed and spring, the beginning of the open season for building is approaching with still no prospect of starting the large building program and with comparatively few dwellings being built. The thousands of building trades workmen who have been idle for more than six months, are still without employment, and the demand for housing facilities remains such that there appears little prospect of relief from high rents in the near future.

The contracts with all but three of the building trades unions will have expired by April, and the general contractors are now planning to post the scale of wages that will be paid after that date, and they say $1 an hour will be the maximum.

Some of the cities that led St. Louis in building last year were:

New York, with permits totaling	$443,000,000.
Chicago,	$124,000,000.
Los Angeles,	$82,000,000.
Detroit,	$58,000,000.
Cleveland,	$46,000,000.
Philadelphia,	$43,000,000.
Baltimore,	$32,000,000.
Milwaukee,	$24,000,000.
Washington,	$24,000,000.
Boston,	$24,000,000.
Pittsburg,	$23,000,000.
Minneapolis,	$23,000,000.
San Francisco,	$20,000,000.

As compared to these, St. Louis had, as stated above, $16,631,305.

Percentages in Building.

These cities, in January of the current year, as compared with January, 1921, show the following percentages in building operations:

New York, five boroughs, increase 272 per cent, with $47,181,000.

Chicago, increase 152 per cent, with $7,810,000.

Los Angeles, increase 142 per cent, with $7,975,000.

Detroit, decrease 5 per cent, with $3,779,000.

Cleveland, decrease 51 per cent, with $1,071,000.

Philadelphia, increase 292, with $4,411,000.

Baltimore, increase 169 per cent, with $3,449,000.

Milwaukee, increase 249 per cent, with $3,191,000.

Washington, D. C., increase 131 per cent, with $2,249,000.

Boston, increase 728 per cent, with $5,867,000.

San Francisco, increase 343 per cent, with $5,529,000.

First Step in Tax Reform.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WAS pleased to note your approval of the proposal by Delegate-at-Large C. M. Shartel of Neosho of a provision for the separation of the sources of State and local taxes in the proposed new Constitution. I think at this time that it is a mistake to confuse this important issue by a discussion of what future Legislatures may do in the way of tapping different sources of State revenues. It is sufficient to know that they are productive enough for all State needs. The principle that the State should collect its revenues from sources other than a direct levy upon real and personal property, and that the local taxing jurisdictions should have the exclusive right to tax such property for local purposes, is the important thing to be recognized, and it would be well to generate a statewide demand for the recognition of this principle by the convention which is to assemble.

The principle is not new. A State Tax Commission was created by the Legislature of this State in 1901, which made an elaborate report in February, 1903, to Gov. A. M. Dockery. That commission, which was composed of W. M. Williams, E. C. Crow and Peyton A. Parks, made the suggestion for the separation of the sources of State and local revenues. Later, in 1907, a second commission made a similar report to Gov. Joseph W. Folk. On this commission were Frederick N. Judson, one of our most eminent lawyers and the author of a work on taxation; Herbert S. Hadley, afterwards Governor of the State; John H. Bothwell, Isadore Loeb, professor of constitutional law at the State University; W. M. Williams and E. C. Crow. Mr. Frederick M. Crunden, former public librarian of this city, was also a member of this commission, and while his illness compelled his resignation before the commission's report was adopted and signed, the report states that he had concurred in the conclusions of the commission. In that report the following language was used, viz.: "We all agreed that the first step in any tax reform is the separation of the sources of State and local revenue." P. W.

Their Knock a Boost.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN the estimation of most of the people, the Post-Dispatch has again "achieved merit" through the condemnation it received from Gus O. Nations and others at the meeting of the State and Federal officers to confer at Jefferson City on the best way of making the punishment for artificial crimes more drastic than they are. The Post-Dispatch editorial on that criminal assault on constitutional rights, at the Alamac Hotel, when 109 people were arrested without warrant or shadow of right and dragged to police headquarters, was a thing calculated to penetrate even the fanaticism that dominates the prohibition crank, and that it and other editorials like it have, is shown by the aforesaid condemnation.

Prohibition is no longer a question of liquor, but of liberty. Admit all the abuses that go with liquor and then double them and the sum will not anywhere equal the damage that has been inflicted on the people through the loss of their liberty, for it is a truism that next to life itself, liberty is the highest desire of the human heart. Inasmuch as the Post-Dispatch is one of the few papers in this country which have had the courage to openly denounce the fakery and fraud, the invasion and the outrage of this monstrous thing called prohibition, it is worthy the support of all men who are intelligent enough to see the very grave disasters toward which prohibition trends.

This trend of prohibition is adumbrated in the remark made by John C. Dyott, who is on the payroll as special assistant to Attorney-General Daugherty. Dyott thinks, according to the newspapers, that too much ridicule is hurled at prohibition and that no Judge should be permitted to sit on the bench and no lawyer to address a jury who heaps ridicule on the dry laws. The Post-Dispatch isn't named, but it is clearly within this category. It has been making fun of our sacred blue laws and therefore it should be choked off.

Prohibition, so absurdly inconsistent in most things, must be consistent in one: it must be progressive. Having taken one right away from the people, it must take away still other rights. It is a mere matter of history that such has been the inevitable course by which the liberties of a great many peoples have been destroyed. Having imposed prohibition, a law is necessary forbidding people to laugh at its hypocrisies, absurdities and inefficiencies; still other laws choking off papers like the Post-Dispatch which demand the ridiculous privilege of a free press. If the logical procedure is followed all these and other laws will come in time.

It seems strange that no politician has yet been able to sense popular feeling on this question. Despite the Eighteenth Amendment, I for one do not believe this country to be as prohibitionist as some people think. Why does not somebody start a movement to run a candidate for Congress in every district in this State on a purely anti-prohibition platform? Such a campaign might possibly develop some surprises. ALPHEUS STEWART.

WEST VIRGINIA'S BARONS.

The real source of the trouble in the coal mining districts of West Virginia was definitely located by Frank P. Walsh in his article in the Sunday Post-Dispatch. That source is the baronial attitude of the mine operators and their ignorance of the Constitution of the United States.

The objection might be raised that Mr. Walsh is hardly the person to make such an investigation, because of his radical sympathies. It happens, however, that in this instance Mr. Walsh has aired no pet views of his own. He has reported the testimony of witnesses before the Senate Investigating Committee.

Two of the witnesses quoted are miners. One is an operator. The testimony of the miners is tragic enough in all conscience as a human document, but in the circumstances of this inquiry it has an extraordinary intellectual value in that it shows the dreadful practical results of the operators' philosophy.

That philosophy was clearly set forth on the witness stand by one of the operators, a Mr. Coolidge of Boston. Mr. Coolidge insisted that the coal miners "have no right of peaceful assembly per se." He acknowledged that if the miners wanted to discuss something the operators approved of, they might assemble, provided they had permission to do so. But they could not meet to discuss anything the operators disapproved of. Moreover, the operators were within their rights in excluding anybody from the county who preached any objectionable doctrine, such as joining the union. The witness insisted that the Deputy Sheriffs whose salaries are paid in part or whole by the operators, have acted properly and legally in driving out of the county anyone whom the operators designated.

Such a construction of property rights is feudal. As business men those operators have never heard of Runnymede, Yorktown or the Philadelphia convention. They have yet to learn the rudiments of American citizenship. Until they do enlighten themselves or are enlightened by the enforcement of the law and the establishment of constitutional rights and guarantees, West Virginia will probably continue to be a disgrace to the United States.

A COMMISSION FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.

The suggestion by Chairman Kahn of the House Military Committee that a national commission be created to dispose of the Muscle Shoals property is a logical, characteristic proposal. It is the typical line-of-least-resistance practice, by which Congress is shirking its duties and building up a bureaucracy.

There may be technical questions in connection with this proposition which nobody in Congress or in the Government's service anywhere can answer, but if that is so, which we doubt, why cannot Congress call in such experts from the outside as may be necessary? Why set up another commission which will spread out steadily and become a permanent, increasing cost to the people?

If there is not enough business capacity in Congress to decide which is the best offer that has been made for Muscle Shoals, after the technical points have been passed upon, Congress ought frankly to say so. And after that confession, before creating this new commission, Congress might give the people another chance to elect a Congress that would be able to transact the business that comes before it.

THE LETTER THAT KILLETH.

The repugnance which is sometimes found to exist between simple justice and the letter of the law is prominently present in the operations of an antiquated maritime law which enables a steamboat company to collect the insurance, when a boat is lost, and transfer its accountability to any salvage that may accrue.

An iniquity in point is the case, up the other day in the United States District Court, in which the Tennessee River Packet Co. took to itself $30,000 insurance for the loss of the City of St. Louis and shifted its obligation for the drowning of a woman to the salvage fund, which yielded for her two children $10 of the $10,000 judgment.

In the high courts where maritime matters are adjudged the spirit that killeth has sway, wherefore District Judge Faris felt himself bound to make rulings which he says were outrageous, but when to iniquity was added the impudence of a demand that the costs of hearing claims be transferred to the salvage account, in amount greater than the total salvage, the spirit that giveth life prompted the Judge to cry out his indignation and overrule the motion.

The letter of the law is mighty and mightily prevails in spite of all that can be done even by Judges who condemn its cruelty, but there is heartening in the declaration of Judge Faris that "I reserve the right to have any feeling in any case I hear, so long as that feeling follows the lines of simple justice."

Everyone to whom simple justice is not a mere sound will share the wish of the Judge that the case will go to the Supreme Court, and it is further to be hoped that in that highest tribunal a way may be found to mitigate with simple justice the injustice of the letter of the law.

AMERICA'S IRELAND.

The duly constituted representatives of the people of Porto Rico are engaged in a fight to the death with a superimposed alien Governor. The Governor has defied the native Senate in the matter of appointments, it is charged, in violation of the organic law of the island. The Senate will appeal to the people to indorse its repudiation of the foreign Governor.

There is no question where the sympathies of the American people would lie if that foreign Governor were appointed by the British King, the King of Spain or a mid-European Emperor. Then it would be wrong, dead wrong, imperialistic and, of all things, un-American. But this time the imperial authority happens to be the President of the United States acting officially for us all. Porto Rico is small and unimportant. It is inhabited by a people on whose civilization we look down with patronizing superiority. The United States, we feel, really can do no wrong. If the Porto Ricans would behave and take orders from our President's political appointees everything would run smoothly.

Even so have the good people of England spoken of Ireland and India. With genuine benevolence of intention they have undertaken, through their Government, to decree to other people what is best for them. This is wrong for England but it is right for us. If, perchance, it is not right we can make it so with a congressional investigation! Could Ireland have asked any more than an investigation by the British Parliament?

It is hard enough at best to make our relations with Porto Rico pass the test of our boasted principles of self-determination, but it will be impossible until the President fires E. Mont Reily.

LEST WE FORGET.

Education is the one industry which continues to produce without regard to European exchange, foreign markets, frozen credits and the other things that interfere with commercial business. It tends rather to flourish in times of industrial depression because children and youths are not attracted in such times to the opportunities of commerce.

While markets and raw material are never lacking in the school industry, the strain on operating equipment continues unabated and threatens both the quantity and quality of the product. By quality is meant not only successfully educated minds but healthy and well developed bodies.

St. Louis is at a point in its career where, if the voters fail to come to the relief of its educational needs, the quality of its school product will suffer. It will require authorization of the electorate on March 28 to keep the schools running on their present basis of support. If the result of the election should be adverse, the basic rate of taxation for the schools would fall automatically from 85 to 60 cents.

We need new schools to house the 6977 pupils who are now subjected to emergency accommodations. The funds for these schools will be available without special funds or bond issues if the present rate of taxation is preserved for the next four years, the length of time to be covered by the authorization which is now being sought.

While the average male voter may be apathetic at school elections the woman vote should be solid in the cause of the children. This is an issue to which there can be no negative answer. There must be no negligence or lapse of interest which would result in an unrepresentative decision at the polls.

By Clark McAdams

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"IT must be that we don't realize the situation in Russia or there would be something in the nature of a gold rush to that country," Mr. Antwine said.

"Imagine the Yukon in its palmy days and only one man caring to go! If you can do that, you have a parallel to the phenomenon of Washington D. Vanderlip sailing for Russia from New York a few days ago to get further concessions in Siberia.

"Nobody knows just what the relation of Mr. Vanderlip to the soviet government is, but apparently it is nothing more than business. He wants to develop some of the natural wealth of Siberia, and the soviet government is willing to give him almost any concession he wishes.

"But while Mr. Vanderlip is the sole argonaut going from this country to the new El Dorado of Siberia, he is not the only one going to all Russia. He is merely the only one we hear a great deal about. There are other Americans securing development grants, some of them in the coal fields, others in the forests and still others in oil. It is difficult to determine the value of these concessions. Maybe Mr. Vanderlip was able to convince banking interests of their value. At any rate, he said when he set out from New York the other day that he was going back for more.

"This fairly typifies the romance of business. A few men with vision and courage are not afraid to traffic with the soviets. They go right in with the amazing gall of the Yankee, and as we usually wake up to find that type of man rich we shall probably wake up to find these people the real beneficiaries of the Russian revolution.

"Two young Americans are said to have a concession in a coal field which is either worth millions or not worth anything. Mr. Vanderlip is a potential Rockefeller or this is the last steamship fare he will succeed in raising. We don't know. We can only recall that this sort of person is usually on hand when the rest of us get to any new field and has everything nailed down," Mr. Antwine said.

Someone tells us that blondes, while thinking quicker than brunettes, are not so tenacious nor so able to carry things through. Curiously, he says nothing of red heads, though their superiority over the blondes or brunettes is so marked that we have only just emerged from an effort to account in this way for the exceptional ability of George Washington.

THE MISSING DETAIL.

The scene that was flashed onto the screen was one of barbaric, unearthly splendor; thick clouds, massed together, rolled and tossed as if driven by a tempest; mists gathered and formed ghostly shapes. Presently, through the semi-obscurity, a great shimmering shape made its appearance. A trail of smoke followed in the wake of the shape; one could almost hear the roar of exploding cylinders.

Uh-huh—it was one of them new passenger-carrying b'loons.

Beneath the great body of the balloon was hung a compartment, fitted with royal housings. Fade-out.

A close-up showed that in this compartment a life-and-death struggle was going on between the heroine—a jane of exceedingly great beauty—and the villain, a bird of great strength and not a few whiskers. Close-up of whiskers.

The moment was tense. The heroine's strength was fast waning; the villain seemed about to gain his end—that of her utter destruction. Fade-out.

Aha! What is this we see scooting across the summer's sky? An airplane, as we live! An old model, 'tis true; engine slightly out of tune, one wing drooping, tail broken and patched—but none the less, an airplane. In the forward seat of the fusilage of this machine is seated a handsome, determined looking young hero, who gazes tensely at the fleeing b'loon. He thrusts one hand forward, as if bidding it to stay. Fade-out.

We see the 'plane circle around the slower craft; we see it take to the higher reaches of the air; we see a rope ladder dangle over its side—we see the hero slide down this unstable way. Fade-out.

We see the brief, fierce struggle in the cabin; we see the villain, his form, go hurtling through the air, to strike with a sickening thud—furnished by a drummer chappie—against the earth, far, far below. We hold our breath. "Good gracious!" exclaimed the novice. "What a horrible end is depicted here!"

The seasoned movie fan was not so easily impressed. She gazed with something closely approaching scorn at the inert body of the erstwhile villain—lying in a huddled heap on the ground.

"Ah, I dunno," she said; "it wasn't such a stunt. He might have heaved in a few flops after he hit the ground!" JEFF ROTORBAR.

Some of the constituents of Congressman Harry Hawes, who seems the chosen defender of the amateur wireless, have warned him of a conspiracy to fill the air with advertising instead of calls of ships far out at sea and performances of grand opera in Chicago and New York. The Congressman is advised that under a contemplated arrangement with the distributing agencies there will be let loose a veritable babble about breakfast foods, shaving creams, patent medicines, etc., and they want him to hurl himself upon this bill as the champion of the pure wireless and kill it. Mr. Hawes is naturally a little puzzled. He doesn't know how we are to forbid anybody the air, and it bothers him how we could head off someone insisting upon broadcasting his claim to be making the greatest tooth powder ever invented. Nevertheless, he has properly and promptly ranged himself upon the side of those who would reserve the right for romance and music, and is waiting for the bill to show its head on the floor of the House.

And does Spring sing to me—or you?

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

JAPAN AT THE CONFERENCE.

DR. S. WASHIO in the Japanese Advertiser.

THE greatest significance of the Washington conference for Japan, as far as I can [illegible] is the fact that in it she has taken a decisive [illegible] toward the policy of nonobstruction. Some [illegible] ago I stated why Japan should under no circumstance fight America. One of the most effective ways to enforce this teaching is to disillusion [illegible] of any hope of a successful war. If Germany [illegible] known that England would come on the side [illegible] France and that America would also be dragged into it, she would never have begun the war. The abrogation of the Anglo-Japanese alliance [illegible] warns Japan that in the event of a serious [illegible] arising between her and America, England will almost certainly use her balance in favor of the latter * * * With respect to China, Japan is also in very much the same predicament as Germany with respect to Russia. Shantung was her Brest-Litovsk. And the utmost concession of Japan on the Shantung question will have very much the same effect as the collapse of Germany after the Brest-Litovsk treaty. * * * If Japan keeps [illegible] moral victory closely to heart and henceforth bends her whole energy to the improvement [illegible] her internal conditions, which are at present [illegible]ly more serious than any foreign problem [illegible] confronted with, she may some day have [illegible] to be thankful for the apparent defeat in the conference.

THE IMMIGRATION LAW.

From the New York World.

IN voting to extend for one year the 3-per-cent immigration law, the House did nothing to excuse or justify the administration of the law. Experience has proved that the law is vicious in principle and unworkable in practice. The fact that exception has been made within a year in over 1500 cases for "reasons of humanity" reveals [illegible] in the face of immutable provisions discrimination among immigrants has been made. There could be no plainer admission of the injustice of the system than to plead that from motives of benevolence it was necessary to disregard the rules laid down by Congress. Nothing was said, and nothing has ever been done, about the thousands of other cases where aliens after paying their [illegible] across the Atlantic have been sent back through no fault of their own, merely because particular monthly quotas had been filled before their arrival. It is a foolish law, unfair and impracticable in operation, as has been many times shown, but the House dared not make it over on better lines.

BUSINESS REVIVAL.

From the Columbus Dispatch.

THOSE who watch the steel business, as the most reliable weather vane of industrial tendencies, can take at least a slight renewal of courage from Pittsburg reports for the past week. The week saw the largest increase in steel production of any seven days for many months, and is said to have brought the rate of steel ingot output up to 28,000,000 gross tons per year. The seasonal increase last fall reached its maximum in October and November, when a rate of 23,000,000 tons per year was reached. We are now more than [illegible] per cent above that figure, and the effect of the spring demand is not yet fully felt. Part of the increase in production is due to the present [illegible] of railroad orders which have been in hand for some time past, but a large share is against orders placed for as prompt shipment as possible. The demand is widespread, coming from all sections of the country and all classes of consumers. The average mill is said to be hardly [illegible] overhead expenses at present prices; but as the volume of output increases the average cost of production per ton will fall. Under present conditions the road to a fair profit lies [illegible] that direction, and not in a rise of prices, which would immediately curtail consumption. [illegible] staple industries, a low rate of profit [illegible] with quick overturns and a large volume of business, is the end to be sought.

FRIEDMAN EXCELS IN SOFT, TENDER PLAYING

Famous Polish Pianist Heard Here for First Time, With Maurice Dambois.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

AS mellow and golden a tone as ever welled from the keyboard was evoked last night at the Odeon by Ignaz Friedman, a distinguished Polish pianist, who made his first St. Louis appearance on this occasion. As a co-artist was presented Maurice Dambois, an accomplished Belgian 'cellist, who has played here once before.

There was a most exquisite delicacy of style in Friedman's performance of Chopin's Nocturne in B Major, Op. 9—a performance which alone would establish him as one of the most poetic interpreters of his countryman's muse. The "Butterfly" Etude was given with unbelievable speed and extreme daintiness, but on occasion with an eccentric over-emphasis of the left-hand part which quite overpowered the treble. The Etude "in thirds," which followed, was a miracle of technique.

Best in Soft, Gentle Passages.

Contrary to advance information, which had heralded Friedman as one of the stormers of the keyboard, he proved far more successful in soft and gentle passages than in dramatic incidents. Liszt's "Les Preludes" was given in a dreamy, meditative style contrasting to little advantage with the heroic eloquence to which we are accustomed when the Symphony Orchestra performs the same composition. And Chopin's Polonaise, Op. 53, betrayed in its great episodes a certain strain and lack of crisp clearness.

After the Chopin group it seemed as if the audience would never release the pianist, who returned for three extras in a row. They were Gertner's "Wiener Waltzer," arranged by Friedman; the pianist's own uiece, "Elle danse," and Hummel's Rondo in E-flat.

Admirable 'Cello Playing.

The numbers offered by Dambois, played with rare fire and skill, were a Concerto by Saint-Saens, the performer's "Clair de Lune," Boccherini's inescapable Minuet in A Major, and Popper's "Tarantelle." The addenda were Schubert's "La jeune mere," Breval's Rondo, and Popper's Hungarian Rhapsody. William A. Parson played the accompaniments for Dambois' encores.

By means of a piano reproducing device, the 'cellist was enabled to play his own accompaniments for the programed numbers, and Friedman, by the same means, was heard in both parts of a two-piano arrangement of "Les Preludes."

As a concluding number, both artists presented Saint-Saens' Sonata for violoncello and piano, Op. 32. Numerous encores stretched to almost interminable length a program already of generous proportions, but all save a few of an unusually large audience remained to the end.

PAGEANT CHORAL WILL BE HEARD IN TWO WORKS TONIGHT

The St. Louis Pageant Choral Society, at 8 o'clock tonight at the Odeon, will give its third and final concert of the season, presenting Arthur Goring Thomas' cantata, "The Swan and the Skylark," and Rachmaninoff's choral symphony, "The Bells."

The soloists will be Virginia Listeman Baxter, soprano; Miss Louise Kroeger, contralto; Frederick Gunster, tenor, and Herbert Gould, bass. Miss Baxter is a daughter of Bernhard Listeman, former concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and obtained her musical education in Dresden, London and Paris. Miss Kroeger is a St. Louisan. Gunster has appeared with success as a soloist in New York, Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia. Gould sang with the Pageant Choral in the "Messiah" two years ago.

Practically all of the boxes have been subscribed, and the advance sale for other sections of the house is said to be unusually large.

The Symphony Orchestra, with Frederick Fischer directing, will accompany the singers.

MAY WIRTH, EQUESTRIENNE, HEADS GOOD ORPHEUM BILL

Bareback riding and bareback dancing are the keynotes of this week's Orpheum bill, which is of true "big time" quality from start to finish. The topliner is May Wirth, equestrienne queen of the sawdust ring. Here is a wonderful performer, whose energy and agility have been developed to the feminine limit. The act is beautifully staged, and Miss Wirth has the able assistance of "Phil," best of all riding comedians.

Second in place only because it lacks the novelty of the circus ring setting is the Santos and Hayes Revue in three scenes, in which there are singing and dancing of rare quality. Features of this act are the dancing of Miss Robbie Tremaine and the comedy work of "Buster" Santos, the stoutest woman in vaudeville, and Mary Jane Hayes, the thinnest.

Ed Janis and his company also have a fine dancing act. Miss Tremaine, in the Santos-Hayes revue, and Carmen Rooker, in the Janis act, have dances which approach the limit of daring in physical exposure.

A nameless Apollo who opens the bill with a cannon-ball juggling act has as a foil a superlatively funny partner billed as Rudolph Wagner, "the international comedian." Frank Farron is progressively ingratiating in his monologue turn. Arthur Stone and Marion Hayes have a good "rube" act, and William Demerest and Estelle Collette use a violin and 'cello as adjuncts to amusing buffoonery.

SECOND WILL BY EADS' STEPDAUGHTER FILED

$3000 Bequest to Brother-in-Law, British Officer, Revoked by Mrs. Adelaide Hazard.

A second will of Mrs. Adelaide Eads Hazard, stepdaughter of the late James B. Eads, builder of Eads bridge, was filed here yesterday. Mrs. Hazard, who died in Paris last October, left an estate valued at about $40,000, and including some pieces of St. Louis real estate.

In her first will, which was made Nov. 20, 1919, and was filed here Jan. 30, Mrs. Hazard left $3000 to her brother-in-law, Lieut.-Col. Thurlow Ubsdell of the British army.

In the second will, dated Nov. 17, 1920, and filed here yesterday, Mrs. Hazard revoked the bequest to Col. Ubsdell, and explained why she did so. She wrote that when she was visiting her sister, Mrs. Ubsdell, in England, Mrs. Ubsdell remarked that she had not left Mrs. Hazard anything in her will, except a small remembrance. After learning of this, Mrs. Hazard made her new will, leaving nothing to either of the Ubsdells. The second will supersedes the first one.

In the will filed yesterday bequests of $12,500 each are made to Victor Mazou and his wife, Julie, for faithful services to Mrs. Hazard for 25 years, and the remainder is divided equally among three nephews, John and Joseph McHenry and Louis Haeberle, the latter living in France. Another nephew, a son of the Ubsdells, received in 1916 all that his aunt wished to give him, the will states.

Harriet Cole of England, named as a beneficiary in the first will, does not appear in the second one. The first will provided that the balance of the estate, after the $3000 bequest to Col. Ubsdell, should be placed in trust and payments of $50 a month made to John McHenry, one of the nephews, and to Harriet Cole.

O. HENRY PRIZE IS AWARDED

Edison Marshall, Medford, Ore., Wins $500 Honor for 1921.

By the Associated Press.

MEDFORD, Ore., March 7.—Edison Marshall of this city has received official notice that the O. Henry memorial prize for 1921 has been awarded to him for "the best short story written during the year." The prize is $500.

The notification invited Marshall to attend the annual dinner of the society, which will be held March 20, and receive the award in person. He will accept, he said. The prize-winning story, "The Heart of Little Shikara," was published in January, 1921. Its plot was laid in India.

New Lord Chief Justice Named.

LONDON, March 7.—Sir Ernest Pollock, the Solicitor-General, has been appointed Attorney-General to succeed Sir Gordon Hewart, recently elevated to the Lord Chief Justiceship. Leslie Frederic Scott, who was special delegate to represent Great Britain at the international conferences on maritime law at Brussels in 1909 and 1910, has been appointed Solicitor-General.

COHAN'S RETURN MADE WITH CAPITAL FARCE

"Madeleine and the Movies" Is Experience of Screen Hero During Slumbers of His Valet.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The good reunion at the Gaiety last night that restored the truant George M. Cohan to his loyal public also gave the theater a capital farce that has his familiar trade-mark stamped indelibly on it. To say that "Madeline of the Movies" has much of the manner of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" is, perhaps, the best way to describe the mazes and entanglements through which it leads its audience, although it is never quite so deft as that earlier piece. But a good, if just a bit subdued, farce it is, and one that ought to have a lively interest for spring playgoers who like wholesome and hearty fun.

Its story is the fantastic impressions of a dream, but for all that it seems excitingly real. It is the experience that comes to a famous movie hero during the slumbers of his faithful valet, who has been whiling away the midnight hours reading an indigestible scenario.

Everybody Is Bewildered.

At first you are deceived into believing the story of the girl who comes to warn the celebrated Garrison Paige of the screens, of impending danger. This straightened out satisfactorily in your mind, you are driven to confusion by the contradictory story his next midnight caller has to tell. The million dollar star can only believe it is all a joke. But when he brings his friends, the scenarist and the director, into the tangle the plot thickens into a blackmailing scheme with ramifications that finally bewilder everybody.

Telephones ring incessantly. Unexpected callers are continually arriving at the hero's front doors. So you have again the trick that Cohan used so successfully in his "Baldpate" play of building up what seems to be a plausible and humorous situation, only to find it crumbling into nothing when suddenly transpiring new events give the meandering story another unexpected twist. It is all very amusing and highly ingenious, and you enjoy it most for the constant mystifications to which it leads. Indeed, you are quite disappointed when you find you have not been fooled again, and that all that has happened is really a dark blackmailing plot—in a dream.

The Why of the Name.

Why "Madeleine and the Movies?" Why, just because Madeleine is Cohan's daughter, Georgette, who has come back to the stage to try her hand again at the family profession. And what proud father would not name a farce for such a pretty daughter?

The cast is good and it acts the play with plenty of Cohan spirit. There are James Rennie as the perturbed movie star, Harry Mestayer as the implicated scenarist, Edward Mannery and Thomas Jackson as the blackmailers, Frank B. Sheridan as an honest "cop," various others, and last, but not least, Ruth Donnelly, who gives a capital performance in the Aggie role. We also should not forget Frank Hollins as the dreaming valet. Nor should we avoid saying that the romantic interest of the story is a little weak.

Cohan made a speech, a very modest speech. He seemed happy to be back on Broadway.

MARIO LAURENTI, SINGER, DIES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Mario Laurenti, 30 years old, Metropolitan Opera baritone, died here this morning, following a brief illness. He caught cold several days ago while on a concert tour and after a few days spinal meningitis developed.

The singer was born at Verona, Italy, and came to this country seven years ago. At various times he assumed roles in "Pagliacci," "Manon," "Faust," "Die Tote Stadt" and "The Snow Maiden."

Indian and Bohemian Married.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Red Wing, who claims to be chief of the Ojibway Indian tribe at Chippewa Hills, Kan., was married yesterday to Marion Stehlik, a native of Bohemia. The chief described himself as a "scientific and artistic manufacturer," with headquarters in Thirty-seventh street, while his bride said she was a designer.

BEAR STAMP BRINGS $231

Issued by St. Louis Postmaster About 1840.

A St. Louis Bear Stamp, one of those issued by the St. Louis Postmaster about 1840, recently sold for $231 at an auction sale in Boston. The stamp has two bears on it arranged as in the seal of the State of Missouri. At the time these stamps were issued they were issued by the local postmasters instead of the United States Government.

A United States Pan-American stamp, issued in 1901, in which the center of the design had been inverted by mistake, brought $732.

News of the Business World

By Wire to the Post-Dispatch

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 7.

Northwest business men await the coming of spring in full confidence that the hard-pressed farmer will be able to adjust his finances. Money is easier. Recent increases in the price of agricultural products has enabled the farmer to accumulate some ready money. Bankers assert comparatively few farm mortgages will be foreclosed in this region and that seeding will start late this month, under adequate financing.

A careful survey of the Northwest indicates 40 per cent of the farmers are in no financial difficulty, 43 per cent able to pull through without much difficulty, and only 5 per cent of the remainder who cannot recover their losses and get back on their feet. Dairy districts are in the best shape financially. The survey indicated that the financial soundness of the Northwestern farmers was greatest in Minnesota and Wisconsin, North Dakota, Montana and South Dakota following in the order named.

There has been a slight falling off in wholesale trade due to weather conditions. Retail business holds firm here, but is hampered somewhat in rural regions by the snow blockade.

STEEL SITUATION BETTER.

PITTSBURG, Pa.—The steel industry now has a more encouraging outlook than at any time for over a year. The coal market is displaying a firmer tone and nearly all markets in this area show a tendency toward improvement. Betterment in the industries is not fully reflected in retail trade and collections, but changes are in a favorable direction. Millinery is picking up in response to seasonal demand and sales of winter clothing are clearing the shelves for spring stocks.

A building boom is under way in this district which promises to solve the housing problem. According to actual statistics, permits were issued for the erection of 204 dwellings in the first two months of the year these to cost $1,755,000. Immediate operations within the city limits are on a basis of erection of 1200 dwellings a year and favorable weather will widen this movement. The Chamber of Commerce Housing Corporation, for example, estimates that it will begin work on 300 dwellings as soon as the weather permits. Construction of large business structures is on a similar scale.

Lumber prices are irregular with hardwood firm. Dealers are inclined to look for higher prices in some lines of building materials.

EASTER NEARNESS FELT.

NEW YORK.—The Easter season already has begun to exert an influence on both wholesale and retail trade in this district. The markets this week are crowded with buyers from out-of-town retail houses who are seeking spring stocks. These purchasers are not shopping for exceptionally large quantities, and they are paying strict attention to price inducements, but the volume of business, while spotty in some lines, is holding up well on the whole.

Shoe factories are fairly busy with more demand for high-grade women's shoes, but tanners are doing little and hides are dull. Structural steel inquiry has been somewhat better. There is interest mani-

Pottery and glassware are showing increased signs of life and plants are well supplied with orders. The paint business is improving and demand for plumbing supplies and electrical equipment is more evident.

LEATHER.

PEABODY, Mass.—The tanneries which are equipped to make patent leather have all the business they can handle. Demand for other leathers is dull, but manufacturers of women's shoes are buying all the patent leather they can get.

CANNED GOODS.

SAN FRANCISCO. — Stocks of canned goods are being cleaned up well. Some lines are short. Clingstone peaches and apricots are scarce and pears are in good demand.

MACHINERY.

EL PASO, Tex.—Additional railroad shops throughout Texas, which have been closed since Jan. 1, have reopened.

NEW YORK.—The activities of the American Locomotive Co. are expected to increase this year, as it is believed additional foreign business can be booked because of the betterment of the foreign exchanges.

TEXTILES.

PHILADELPHIA. — While local textile mills are operating well, there has been a decline in the demand for both woolen and cotton yarns.

COTTONSEED OIL.

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Texas cottonseed crushers claim that for the first time in two years they are able to do business on a paying basis. They declare they now are getting back more for the oil than they put into the purchase of seed.

SEATTLE, Wash.—Over-production of eggs on the North Pacific Coast has resulted in a drop in prices to around 26 cents a dozen to retailers. The storage season is still some weeks off and poultry men are complaining bitterly, declaring they cannot make a profit at present prices.

COAL.

UNIONTOWN, Pa.—Production of coal and coke continues to increase. Both the H. C. Frick and independent interests are firing additional ovens. With the approach of April 1 this district is preparing for maximum production. Spot furnace coke is quoted at $3.25 to $3.50, depending upon quality. Foundry is quotable at $4.25 to $4.75. "Certainly Did Wonders For Me"

Mrs. A. E. Hager, 909 London Road, Duluth, Minn., writes: "I have been taking your Cadomene tablets for the past month. They certainly did wonders for me, as I was so nervous I wasn't able to do my own housework; so sick and miserable. Now I can do all my own work and feel good all the time. My daughter and her husband have also been taking them, and they helped wonderfully."

Cadomene should be taken by any one who has symptoms of impoverished blood and weak nerves, like the following:—Nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, nervous indigestion, headache, backache, cold extremities and lack of energy.

Cadomene supplies iron and phosphorous with other tonics that build up blood and Nerve Force. Take them and see how quickly they bring astonishing benefit to your poor "frazzled" nervous system. All good druggists sell them.

Sisler and Tobin Report to Fohl at Training Camp

Regular Squad Now Will Work Together in Preparation for Series of Exhibitions.

YOUNG HURLERS IMPRESS

Meine and Deien Display Signs of Big League Caliber in Practice Contest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBILE, Ala., March 7.—With the arrival today of George Sisler and John Tobin, Manager Lee Fohl will now be able to send in his regular lineup preparatory to the starting of the long series of exhibition games, the first of which will be played Saturday afternoon against the Mobile team. It is Fohl's intention to have a game every day between members of the squad during the remainder of the stay at Monroe Park.

The youngsters, led by Pat Collins and Jimmy Austin, defeated the regulars yesterday, score 6 to 4. Fohl sent six pitchers into the game, each taking three innings, and the hurlers performed in very creditable style.

Henry Meine, the St. Louis boy, who last year pitched ball for Beaumont, opened on the hill, and Fohl was well pleased with the showing of this husky right-hander. Meine has an easy, graceful manner of pitching, and also plenty of nerve. It is confidently expected that he will be one of the new-comers who will be retained as a member of the Browns' pitching staff for the season of 1922.

Deien Shows Wares.

Henry Deien next took a turn on the firing line, and the tall right-hander who hails from Breese showed the boys more stuff than they have looked at since the training work started, Feb. 23. Deien has improved very rapidly, and prospects are bright for the former coal miner to remain with the Browns.

Hubert Pruett relieved Deien, pitching the final three innings of the game. Pruett is a left-hander who last year pitched excellent ball for Tulsa after joining the team late in the summer. Pruett was formerly a member of the Missouri University nine. He showed plenty of speed in his work on the hill yesterday and also excellent control.

Frank Smith, the St. Louis boy, John Overlock of Chicago, both right-handers, and Frank Henry, the latter a left-hander, were on the mound for the opposing team. All three made a good showing. Henry was a trifle wild, but he managed to crawl out of several precarious places in good style.

Williams Hits a Homer.

Kenneth Williams played only part of the game, but the big left-hander was in just long enough to crack out a home run off Overlock. "Kennie" lifted the ball over the right-field wall. After the wallop he retired from the game, saying that he had had enough practice for the day.

Eugene Robertson was sent in to play third for Collins' team yesterday and Mullen was stationed at second base. Both St. Louis boys played good ball. Robertson especially has improved vastly, both in his fielding and hitting. Te now comes up with a ball quickly and throws to first rfom any position.

Chic Shorten made a sensational catch in the fifth when he chased into deep right center for Robertson's hard drive.

AGGIES GIVE TIGERS A SCARE, BUT LOSE IN SEASON'S FINAL GAME

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANHATTAN, Kan., March 7.—The Kansas Aggies last night gave the Missouri basketball team one of the closest games of the season, threatening throughout the game to defeat the conference leaders. Missouri won by virtue of the superior free throwing of Bond, score, 32 to 28.

The going was nip and tuck all the way in the first half, until Missouri pulled ahead when Bond scored three field goals in a row in the last five minutes.

The score at the half was Missouri 17, Aggies 11. In the second period the Aggies outscored the invaders, but not enough to put the game away.

Capt. Cowell, right guard for the Aggies, playing his last game with the team, rounded out three years of exceptional performance by as pretty an all-round exhibition of play as has been seen on the Nichols "gym" court.

Amateur Title at Stake.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 7.—The National Amateur three-cushion billiard championship was to be decided here today when Frank I. Fleming of Champaign, Ill., and Adolph Spielman of the Chicago A. A. played off the tie which resulted from the matches last night. Both Fleming and Spielman have [illegible] matches and have lost two.

Gibbons and Greb Prepare.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Tom Gibbons of St. Paul and Harry Greb of Pittsburg, light heavyweights, who will meet in a 15-round match in Madison Square Garden next Monday night, were busy with squads of sparring partners at their training quarters today. The St. Paul man weighed in this morning at 172 pounds.

Wray's Column

Is the Laborer Worthy of His Hire?

BABE RUTH has just signed under salary conditions that call for approximately $75,000 pay for 154 two-hour work days. That is at the rate of $259.74 per hour. The public probably considers that this master architect of the circuit drive is worthy of his hire, for it pays to see him without murmur.

Babe's employers probably feel satisfied. For in baseball it is not what you are today, it is what you can lure to the box office.

Here's where the owners get off: At an average of 75 cents per head, Ruth would have to draw 100,000 fans to the games in which he plays to return to the club treasury the amount of his salary. This would mean only 649 persons for each of the 154 games played by the Yanks in a season.

As a matter of fact, Ruth packs the park every time he comes to St. Louis, on a Sunday; and on week days there is little doubt that he adds from 3000 to 5000 to the local attendance. The same applies in other cities.

Ruth, the drawing card rather than the player, seems to be worth several times his salary.

Ruth is probably no more valuable to his club than Carl Mays, the great pitcher who was the most important factor in winning 27 games for his club last season. As between the two players Carl was probably directly responsible for more victories than Ruth.

Mays has signed again for $10,000 a year, with a bonus IF HE EARNS IT. Ruth signed for $50,000 and $500 for each home run he makes! The answer is that the fans like Ruth and his tremendous clouting; they do not like Mays; and his craft, although greater than Ruth's, is not so spectacular.

* * *

When the public pays extravagantly to see a hero, the hero can also make the promoter pay extravagantly to see his signature on a contract.

* * *

Why Be a Cabinet Officer?

IF newspaper estimates of salaries and earnings derived from mere personal efforts reflect the situation correctly, it is far better financially to be a popular hero than it is to be a public servant, even though the "hero's" line of endeavor may to some seem trivial or undignified.

Consider the case of Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who grew gray as a public servant and arrived, at an annual remuneration of $7500.

He was Federal Judge Landis, then. But that has passed and it is now Baseball Commissioner Landis at a salary of $42,500 and possibly $50,000 a year. Because baseball is better able to pay for his fame than Uncle Sam, the Commissioner receives six times as much as the Judge today!

* * *

Is It to Laugh, or Weep?

AMONG the "public servant" salaries, paid for responsibility and hard work, note that the President of the United States receives $75,000 a year, a cabinet officer $12,000, a Congressman $7500, a college professor no more, the Governor of Missouri $5000.

And yet if holders of such positions had entered the world of sports they might, for comparatively little effort, have matched the following incomes:

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxer, $400,000 last year; Benjamin Block, turfman, $115,000 earned by his horse Morvich; Babe Ruth, $75,000 or more; Ban Johnson, American League president, $30,000; Willie Hoppe, billiard player, $30,000; John McGraw, manager of the Giants, $65,000; Jim Barnes, professional golfer, $25,000; any first-class jockey; $25,000; Glenn Warner, professional football coach, $20,000.

Salaries in World of Sports Compared With Those in Other Fields

THE annual salaries or earnings given below are those that have been attributed to the individuals in news columns of the present or in recent years:

SPORT INCOMES.
Jack Dempsey (1921)	$400,000
Georges Carpentier (1921)	300,000
Morvich (a race horse)	115,000
Babe Ruth (for 1922)	75,000
John J. McGraw	65,000
K. M. Landis (BB. Commissioner)	42,500
Ban Johnson	30,000
Willie Hoppe (billiards)	30,000
Jim Barnes (golf pro)	25,000
Any leading jockey	25,000
Glenn Warner (football coach)	20,000
PUBLIC OFFICIALS' INCOMES.
President Harding	$75,000
Charles Hughes, Secretary of State	12,000
Federal Judges	7,500
Congressmen	7,500
College Professor	7,500
Governor of Missouri	5,000

And if we advance from the sports to the movie world then the "lid is off," in the argot of the rialto. Mary Pickford at $520,000 annually, Charlie Chaplin and Fairbanks at as much or more, make even Charles Schwab's $100,000, steel company presidency appear modest.

That even the public servant will emulate the worm and turn was shown by Will Hays who abandoned the aura of a Cabinet position and $12,000 a year to accept $150,000 annually from the movies.

* * *

The Case of Rogers Hornsby.

ALL St. Louis has its ear to the ground awaiting the outcome of the argument between Rogers Hornsby and the Cardinal leaders over the question of salary for the next three years. It is as if the pennant hinged on the issue—perhaps it does.

Rogers wants as much as he can get, starting with $25,000 annually and scaling down to the point where he can compromise. Rogers is now down to $20,000, and the club has lifted his financial horizon from $15,000 to $17,000.

By comparison with Babe Ruth, Hornsby should get his demands. But reasonig from statistical facts, Hornsby is placed in the light of demanding about 90 per cent increase in pay for a last year's improvement of 19 per cent in play. The figures and the demand are not squared.

Of course Hornsby will be signed. If he should not be, or if the reconciliation should be so delayed that Hornsby fails to hit his stride for several weeks due to lack of training, the young insurance executive who advised Hornsby would probably be burdened by the painful thought that he had cost the local team and the St. Louis fans a pennant.

WRESTLING PROMOTERS HOPE TO GET CADDOCK HERE TO MEET LONDOS

John Contos, wrestling promoter who has been staging bouts at the Odeon the past couple of months, will leave this evening for Omaha to have a conference with Earl Caddock, former world's champion, in regard to a bout in St. Louis.

Contos has written and sent telegrams to the former title holder trying to match him here with Jimmy Londos, the Greek champion. He has received no response, although Caddock has been offered $1500.

The show at the Odeon next Monday night, brings together Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's champion, and Jack Jurka, Australian champion, in the final event; and Jimmy Londos and Jatrinda Gobar, in the semifinal. Both matches are to a finish, two best out of three falls.

PLANS DRAWN FOR 10TH CHICAGO PUBLIC LINKS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Plans have been drawn for the tenth public golf links in Chicago, it was announced today, giving the city the largest number of public courses of any place in the world, although some Scotch towns have more links in proportion to population.

In addition to the 10 links, four of which are 18 holes in length, the outer Park Commissioners are planning another full course and the extension of some of the nine-hole links.

Besides the public links, conducted by the park boards and the forest preserve, there are four pro-rata, or semipublic links, either in operation or under construction, while the plans of the Forest Preserve Commissioners call for the gradual building of several more courses.

All these courses are overcrowded, players waiting in line for hours to get a chance to play. The nine-hole course in Lincoln Park last year was used by 106,000 players, while the 18-hole links at Jackson Park cared for even more golfers.

FOUR ST. LOUIS HIGH SCHOOLS ENTERED IN PIKEWAY BASKET EVENT

Drawings will be held tomorrow for the Mississippi Valley Interscholastic basketball tournament at Washington University, in which numerous high school teams from Missouri and Illinois will compete. Match play will commence Thursday afternoon and will end Saturday night.

Up to this morning 22 entries had been received and a number are still expected before tonight when the entries close.

Central has joined the list of St. Louis high schools that have entered and McKinley is now the only city "prep" school not represented. All the county schools will participate in the tourney.

Most of the matches will be played at Francis Gymnasium, although a few may be played on the University City High School court if the entry is a large one.

A tag sale is being conducted on the Piker campus to defray the expenses of the visiting players, who will be provided with room and board during their stay. Silver loving cups, fobs and pins will be awarded to the players.

Dog Derby Starts Today.

By the Associated Press.

BIG RIVER, Sask., March 7.—The first annual Saskatchewan derby, over a course of 200 miles, is scheduled to get under way at 2 p. m. today. Ten teams have been entered. The trail is reported in good condition. The racers will go to a point 50 miles from here and return, and then go over the same route again.

Kansas and Missouri Tied.

LAWRENCE, Kan., March 7.—Kansas and Missouri Universities are tied for the championship of the Missouri Valley Conference as a result of the Kansas victory over Nebraska here last night, 41 to 18, and the Missouri victory at Manhattan over the Kansas Aggies, 32 to 28.

The pair rolled 1200 in their doubles, on the first afternoon shift, which landed them in fifth place. Cohen and Cassin rolled the next best count, 1177, which is fifteenth place. Rice was the only St. Louis bowler to make over 600. He got 617, which is eighteenth position.

The Post-Dispatch team counted 2477 in the five-man event, on the late shift. McGoogan was high, with 571.

A new singles record of 729 and the entrance of a new pair at the head of the two-men department featured the competition yesterday afternoon.

BUFF POSTPONES TITLE BOUTS; POISONED THUMB PREVENT HIS TRAINING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Johnny Buff, bantamweight champion of the world, is sufering from a poisoned thumb and he is finding it painful as well.

So inflamed is this particular of his boxing hand that he has been forced to give up training and also two bouts, both of which would have added materially to his bank account.

Buff will be unable to meet Roy Moore in Jersey City on Friday evening, and also found it necessary to cancel his bout in Madison Square Garden on March 20, with Joe Lynch, the former bantamweight champion.

SPRING FOOTBALL WORK LAUNCHED AT PIKEWAY

Spring football practice was held yesterday afternoon on the Pikeway Field when about 20 prospective gridders reported to Coach Rider at Francis Field. No more practice sessions will be held this week, but the workouts will be resumed Monday and will continue to the first of April.

Bob Denny, recently elected varsity captain, was on hand with a number of varsity stars, although most of the squad consisted of members of the freshman squad.

The workout lasted over two hours and was devoted to instruction in the elements of the game. Kicking, catching, running and passing practice was held, and Coach Rider gave a number of players instruction in blocking.

Yesterday's turnout was the largest that has ever reported at a Piker spring training session, according to Coach Rider, who expects the squad to be doubled next week.

Foley Floors Wiggins.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—Harry Foley, Tacoma, Wash., won a 20-round decision over Chuck Wiggins of Indianapolis, Ind., last night In the Orleans Athletic Club, both men weighing close to 180 pounds. They fought hard throughout, but Foley sent Wiggins sprawling to the canvas in the fifteenth round with a right to the chin, and after that had it all his own way.

Benningshoven Likely to Stay as Cardinal Catcher

Appears to Be Most Promising of Recruits After Third-String Backstop Job.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ORANGE, Tex., March 7.—Bill Bailey, pitching for the second team in the first practice game this spring at the Cardinal camp, made a serious tactical blunder in the last half of the seventh inning when he threw a "change of pace" to Austin McHenry. Del Gainer was on first at the time, there were two out and the score was tied at 1—1. McHenry transferred Bill's slow ball into a fast one which cleared the left field fence by several feet and ruined a perfectly good ball game, the first team winning, 3—1 in eight innings.

The contest brought out several fine plays. One of the younger pitchers and one of the recruit catchers stood out most promisingly. Bill Barnes worked four innings for the first team and the second team never got a hit off his delivery. Benningshoven, who caught six innings for the first team, displayed a wonderful arm. His throwing was perfect and one throw in particular, by which he nipped Heathcote off first was a defensive gem.

Game Played at Top Speed.

The game was played at top speed with both teams trying their utmost to win. In the field, there was but one error. That was on a ball which Schultz played poorly, giving the batter a life at first. Riviere and Barnes each gave two passes while Benton permitted one batter to stroll. Every pitcher was putting everything he had on the ball and the batters had a strenuous workout. At third base, for the first team, Wimer played a splendid game and his triple paved the way for the first run for his team.

Barring the possibility of Stock playing third, the team which was labeled first yesterday is very likely to take the field against Cleveland Saturday. The outfield will be switched according to the pitching, with Mann and Schultz in center and right, against southpaws and Mueller and Smith performing in those positions if Speaker uses right handers.

The showing of Benningshoven would seem to give him the present preference for that third string catcher's job. He is fairly fast, can hit and his defensive play, yesterday at least, was without a flaw.

Oklahoma City, Ok.—"Cowboy" Padgett of Dolores, Colo., and Ray Long of Oklahoma City, welterweight boxers, fought to a draw in a 10-round bout.

St. Louis Golfer Is Low Medalist

Donald Anderson's 77 Best Card in Palm Beach Qualifying Golf Play.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 7.—The annual golf championship of Palm Beach began yesterday with a large entry, the Palm Beach Country Club course being selected. The qualifying match was won by Donald Anderson, St. Louis, a youth whose splendid and even game took him out in 38 and back in 39; total 77, the lowest score of the day.

Anderson was pitted against such formidable golfers as Al Mendes, winner of last year's championship; William Langford of Chicago, an old Yale champion, and F. C. Newton, Brookline Country Club, former Pacific Coast champion, and Hugh de Willoughby, also a former title holder here. Three sixteens qualified and match play starts tomorrow morning.

Anderson showed a continuance of his past week's form. Twice recently he covered the 18 holes here in 69 strokes, the lowest score made this season. It tied Walter Hagen's 69 made on the same day Anderson made his first 69.

F. C. Newton, Brookline, Mass., who was tied with Anderson for medal honors of the South Florida championship and won on the third play-off of the tie, made an 80 today. Anderson was eliminated in the semi-final round of match play in the previous event. Newton Willoughby and Langford are expected to be the only first flight players to force Anderson to extend himself.

Walloping King On View Tonight

John Kern, Who Swings a Wicked Glove, Will Introduce Anthony Downey to It.

"Banker" John Kern and his 42-centimeter wallop will be the mainstay of the South Broadway Athletic Club's resumption of fistic activity, tonight. Whenever the sparsely thatched cave man enters the ring the St. Louis fans straighten up in their chairs and prepare to have the roots of their hair pleasingly titillated by the thrills the "Banker" provided.

When Kern brings his mit up from the floor the wind whistles as his glove streaks toward the enemy jaw. The spectator's eyes pop out in anticipation of the crash and clank that seem certain to follow. For sheer hitting power there is not a heavyweight in the district can equal this stocky, Caucasian Sam Langford, even though John only waggles the scale beam at about 150 pounds or so.

Tonight Kern faces a factor locally unknown—Anthony Downey, from Cincinnati. Downey is one of a fighting family of three, the senior and most noted member of which is Bryan Downey, the boy who flattened Middleweight Champion Johnny Wilson, at Cleveland, some months ago.

Anthony Downey's record includes only one or two fights against men of wide note; but in 24 battles he has knocked out 10 of his opponents. In his most recent fight he is credited with a victory over Johnny Griffiths in 10 rounds. That ought to classify him as well up in the fistic world—farther along than Kern, who has had no great breadth of experience.

Kern this season has fought oftener and maintained better condition than ever before. Game, and with a mankilling wallop, he steps into the enemy's punches, sometimes taking solid blows in order to return one. It has been suggested that the barren plaza on the front of Kern's dome is the result of blocking enemy leads with the top of his head.

Downey is a youngster and has been boxing for three years only. The fact that with such short preparation he could defeat a veteran such as Griffiths speaks well for his class.

Downey's manager is trying to arrange what should prove an interesting feature. He wants the members of two families to supply the entire card at a boxing show. He would match the three Downeys, Bryan, Joe and Anthony, against the three Shades, George, Billy and Dave, respectively, in the order named.

Dave Shade recently fought a 15-round draw with Jack Britton for the welterweight title.

John "Banker" Kern, St. Louis, vs. Anthony Downey, Columbus, O., 10 rounds, 148 pounds.

Buddy McHale, St. Louis, vs. "Shifty" Logan, Memphis, eight rounds, 148 pounds.

Elmer Kress, St. Louis, vs. "Red" Rieth, six rounds, flyweight.

Referee, Fred Gilmaster.

Concordia, Kan.—Stanislaus Zbyszko, former champion heavyweight wrestler, defeated Jack Rogers, Canadian wrestler, in two straight falls, the first in 34 minutes with a jiu jitsu hold and the second in 5 minutes, 50 seconds, with a wrist lock.

Melbourne—In autumn tennis championship just ended, Gerald L. Patterson and O'Hara Wood carried all before them. Their overwhelming superiority in the play has encouraged most sanguine hopes for the success of the Australian players in the Davis Cup matches.

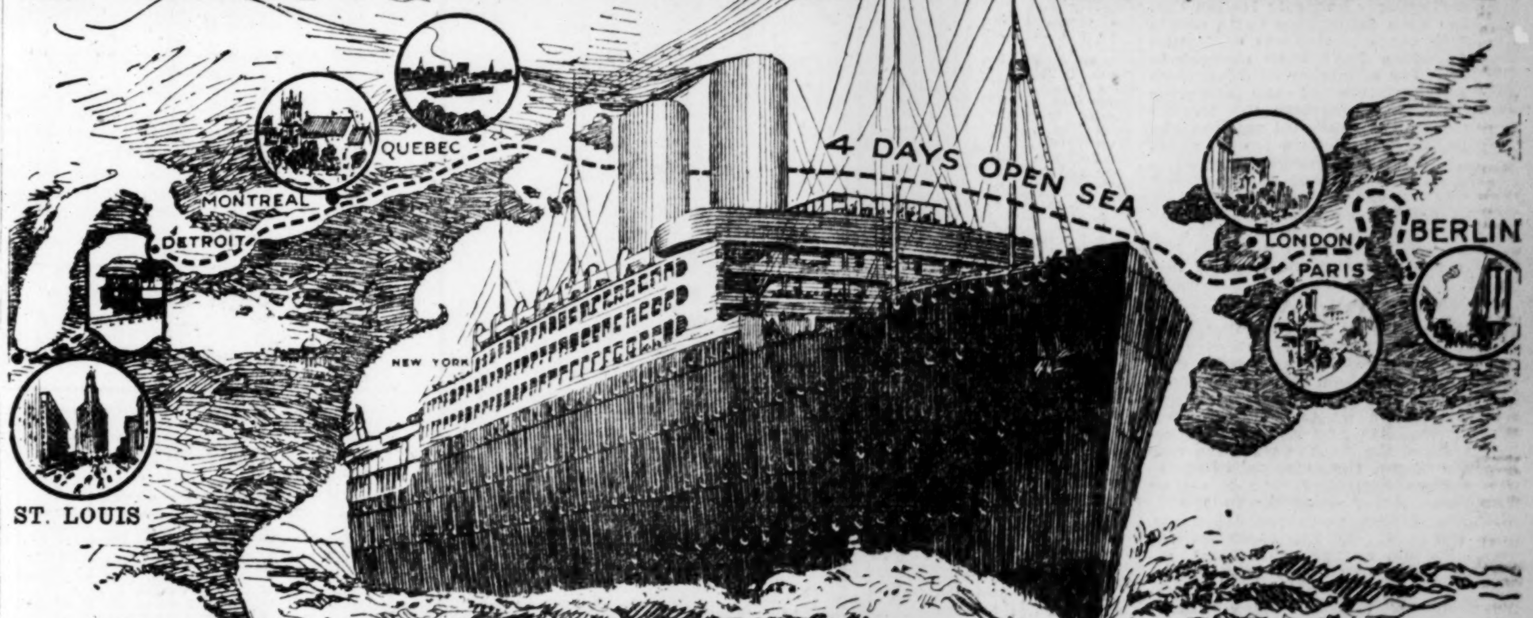
Canadian Pacific



St. Louis to Europe

—to London and Paris only 8 days
—to Berlin only 10 days

When you know how easy it is to reach the great Capitals of the Old World you will be all the more eager to visit Europe this year. The little worries of travel to Europe are smoothed away for you by the Canadian Pacific Route. The moment you board a Canadian Pacific train for Montreal or Old Quebec where you sail, your vacation starts—and it is a vacation de Luxe without a de Luxe cost.

Travel in Comfort All the Way

The connections are easily made, for Canadian Pacific trains meet Canadian Pacific ships. Leaving Montreal or Quebec, after a taste of Old World charm in Old French Canada, you have 2 days smooth sailing down the beautiful St. Lawrence River and Gulf—plenty of time to become acquainted with your delightful room or suite, the dining room, your fellow passengers, and the pleasures of life aboard one of these magnificent ocean liners.

Only 4 Days Open Sea on Atlantic

Experienced travelers prefer the Canadian Pacific Route to Europe because of its magnificent ships and splendid, hospitable service, and also because of the short sea trip. It is a fine vacation of 5 or 6 days on a floating palace but only 4 days of that time on the open sea, owing to the natural advantage of the St. Lawrence route.

Canadian Pacific ships, 29 of them, are constantly linking America with Europe, with sailings every day or so from both sides. The "Empress of Scotland" and "Empress of France", most magnificent liners, land at Cherbourg, Southampton, and Hamburg, making direct connections for Paris, London, and Berlin. The "Empress of Britain" goes to Liverpool, and other express ships of this line land at Antwerp, Liverpool, and Glasgow. The one-class cabin ships offer a comfortable and economical way to visit Europe. It will pay you to inquire about this feature.

Canadian Pacific Spans the World

Every day in the year Canadian Pacific ships are steaming across two oceans—the Atlantic and the Pacific—linking four continents—Europe, North America, Asia and Australasia. The ships of this great fleet are world famous for their service, comfort and speed.

EXCHANGE RATES ON EUROPE DOWN; STOCKS QUIETER

Waiting Attitude in Market — Foreign Bonds Are Strong — Wheat Prices Range Lower.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"The behavior of the chief financial markets was more irregular today and speculative sentiment was somewhat mixed. In stocks, the trading element appeared to take a waiting position and no particular trend was in evidence. The undertone, however, was firm, particularly in the afternoon. Bonds were generally steady in somewhat quieter trading, but the foreign issues continued strong. Call money ruled at 4½ per cent throughout.

European Exchange Lower.

"A reactionary tendency was apparent in the principal European exchanges, sterling losing 1⅛ cents at $4.35¼ and French francs 7 points at 9.01½ cents. Opinion as to the cause of the decline was mixed. Some quarters regard it as merely a natural reaction after the recent pronounced strength, while others maintained that a fairly large supply of commercial bills, originating in exports of sugar, wheat, cotton and oil has recently come on to the market. Support for the latter view is furnished by the fact that the decline was particularly heavy in Italian lire, the loss here amounting to 18 points at 5.04½ cents. Reports of Italian wheat buying have been current in the trade for a number of days. Such an interpretation of the situation finds further support in the irregularity of the Continental market, the Scandinavian currencies showing advance. German marks meanwhile continued heavy at 0.39 of a cent and Austrian kroner a decline to a new low of 0.01⅝ of a cent. Canadian dollars were weak, dropping ⅝ of a cent to 96⅜. This unit now has lost nearly 2 cents from the high of last week.

Wheat Prices Decline.

"Wheat started lower today as a result of disappointing cables from Liverpool where an over bought condition was disclosed, and from Buenos Aires where it turned out yesterday's rise had been greatly exaggerated. Better whether and crop report reports from the Southwest were also ebarish factor, the principal offset to which was continued talk of export business. After dropping to $1.41½ the May future recovered 1⅛ cents, but was still off 1¼ cents on the day. Cotton, on the other hand, remained firm. British sentiment regarding this commodity was somewhat better and our May future gained 14 points at a late price of 18.97 cents.

"Duns index of wholesale commodity prices, meanwhile, added its confirmation to the upward movement during February reported yesterday by Bradstreets index. The gains in the two indices amount of 1.5 and 2.9 per cent respectively. The interesting feature in each instance is that the advance is due to the rally in the prices of breadstuffs and provision. The other groups of the indices show in fact little change. Both agree that metals are lower and the one shows a group in textile while the other demonstrates that clothing prices are practically unchanged.

The Investment Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Victory 4¾s made the new high record of 100.40 in the bond market today, but the general list, domestic and foreign, was irregular.

French Government 7½s, French municipals, Belgian 6s, Queensland 6s and Cuba Cane 6s were strongest of the international group, Mexicans forfeiting part of yesterday's advance.

Peoria and Eastern incomes, at a gain of 1½ points, were strongest of the rails. Fractional advances were made by Reading 4s, St. Paul conventibles and the debentures and Minneapolis & St. Louis. Chicago & Northwestern 5s and distillers 5s were especially heavy, losing 2 points each. Consolidated Gas 7s canceled most of yesterday's gains, declining 1¾ and nominal losses were made by the New Haven 6s, Northern Pacific 4s, Virginia Railway 5s, American Telephone 5s and Armour 4½s.

The bond market showed greater irregularity later. French 8s improved, but Tokio 5s and New Haven 6s lost 1 and 2 points respectively, and Liberty issues were mixed.

DECLINE IN VALUE OF U. S. EUROPEAN TRADE IN JANUARY

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The decline in the value of America's foreign trade in January as compared with January of 1921 is further emphasized in statistics as to trade by continents and countries for the first month of the present year, made public today by the Department of Commerce.

Exports to Europe totaled $148,903,246, compared with $325,218,637 in January a year ago, and $1,219,687,511 for the seven months ending last January, against $2,440,507,216 for the seven months ending in January 1921.

Imports from Europe for January last amounted to $68,113,403, compared with $80,578,643 for January a year ago and $497,170,132 for the seven months ending in January last year, against $621,562,233 for the seven months ending in January a year ago.

Imports were $22,803,043 for last January compared with $30,750,498 for January, 1921, and $154,968,329 for the seven months ending last January, against $352,517,876 for the seven months ending the previous January.

Exports to Asia were $46,073,866 last January, compared with $73,106,685 or the previous January and $290,353,425 for the seven months' period ending last January, against $418,191,850 for the seven months ending January a year ago. Imports were $62,780,681 for last January, compared with $45,318,526 in January a year ago.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Cotton goods in primary channels were quieter yesterday, with print cloths easier in the wide constructions. Sheetings held steady. Tire fabrics and cotton duck were very quiet. Finished goods not of a novelty character were slow. Yarns were dull. Heavyweight burlaps were firm.

Cutters are said to be using more dress fabrics of wool for immediate consumption and retail buying is reported improving in the dress and suit line. High-colored sport silks are reported selling quite well. Jobbers report widely scattered orders from the retail trade, generally in small volume.

TREND GENERALLY HIGHER IN TRADE ON N. Y. CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—There was a collection of specialty movements in the direction of higher prices on the Curb Exchange today. It took only comparatively few buying orders to force a sharp advance in Durant Motors. In the mining group, the new Volcano Mines was again the leader. Operations for the rise were apparent in Goldwyn Pictures and these seemed to be meeting little opposition.

R. J. Reynolds stock was active and strong, following the publication of the annual report. Net earnings were $10,258,322 against $10,691,294 in 1920, and after all preferred and common dividends there was a surplus of $10,058,322 against $5,691,294 the year before.

Profit-taking sales made their influence felt in Intercontinental Rubber and Libby, McNeil & Libby. Oil shares were very irregular, moving for the most part within narrow limits, however.

Increased Moisture Aids Kansas Wheat.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7. — Increased moisture has improved the condition of winter wheat in Kansas, while a lack of it has resulted in a poor condition of the crop in parts of Nebraska, Colorado and New Mexico, the Department of Agriculture reported today in its crop review for the last half of February. In Illinois, Indiana and Ohio some damage was reported from alternate freezing-thawing; conditions were said to be favorable in Central Iowa, Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia while lack of snow cover in Southern Iowa and Wisconsin was reported to be retarding growth. Condition of winter rye was said to be generally favorable in the Central States.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Left today without any fresh impulse one way or the other, the drift in all the markets was uncertain. Speculative sentiment on the Stock Exchange, for the moment, is divided.

The two factions have been working at cross purposes since Friday last. The results have been varying so far as the general list is concerned. The general movement today was irregular, but the points of strength in special stocks far outstripped the points of weakness.

The Victory 4¾s reached a new high, but otherwise there were very few features in the bond trading of the day. The check to the upward movement in the foreign exchanges has held its effect upon foreign Government bonds, and although these are holding around their high levels, they have stopped going up.

• • •

The Bond Market.

Interest in today's bond market centered especially in the large volume of current offerings, both domestic and foreign. The success of the five-year 7 per cent Argentine loan yesterday was followed by the announcement of new loans aggregating approximately $50,000,000. It was evident that the easy money market was proving favorable, not only in helping to maintain the strength of listed bonds, but in regard to new financing.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today received the application of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railway Co. to issue $8,351,000 consolidated mortgage 4½ per cent bonds. The company intends to use $6,251,000 of the amount to refund maturing indebtedness and $2,100,000 for improvement.

Among the announcements was the award to a New York syndicate of $14,500,000 four-and-a-half and five per cent various improvement City of Detroit bonds. The price paid was 102.77 The city Controller of Detroit also sold at auction about $7,100,000 5 per cent public utility bonds dated May 1, 1920, and maturing May 1, 1950. A Detroit firm was the successful bidder and secured the block at $106.75. Another New York syndicate has bought $5,000,000 5-per-cent 30-year Philippine Island government improvement bonds for 101.66.

• • •

Corn Products.

Corn Products stock made another new high record, crossing 107. A heavy reduction in operating profits is shown in the annual report. As compared with a total of $18,586,032, in 1920, the 1921 total was $9,451,409. A like amount was appropriated for the depreciation. Only $825,000 was reserved last year for Federal taxes as against $4,580,000 the year before. The surplus for 1921 was $1,601,428 as against $7,533,004 in 1920.

• • •

Fertilizer Stocks.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical and American Agricultural Chemical common and preferred ran up easily once they started. These stocks apparently were trailing the other farm supply issues, like the mail order shares and the stocks of implement making companies, on which the first buying converged following the jump in wheat and corn prices.

CATTLE MARKET ACTIVE AND UNDERTONE STRONG

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., March 7.—Today's estimated receipts: Cattle and calves, 4500; hogs, 11,500; sheep, 2000; horses and mules, 600.

CATTLE—The market was again fairly active under a moderate supply and a strong undertone prevailed in most departments; canner and cutter cows, an exception, showed a weaker trend. The top for steers was $8.40 per cwt., paid for a load averaging around 1100 lbs. Feeder steers topped at $7.10. Veal calves averaged 25c to 50c lower. Some of the best sorted lights sold up to $11 to shippers, though $10.50 caught most of the best.

Quotations: Beef steers, high, $9.50; low, $5.50; bulk, $7 to $8; butcher yearlings, high, $9.25; low, $3.75; bulk, $6 to $7.50; butcher cows, range, $3.75 to $6.25; butcher cows, bulk, $4.25 to $5.75; canner and cutter cows, range, $2.50 to $3.50; beef bulls, bulk, $4.25 to $5.50; bologna bulls, bulk, $3.75 to $4.50.

HOGS—Hog market was active on a light Tuesday supply, with the average about a dime higher than yesterday. Demand was adequate to move the supply in good season. Top was 5c higher, at $11.40, while bulk of the hogs sold in a narrow spread of $11.25@11.35, compared to $11.10@11.30 the preceding day. The one bad feature was the slow market for pigs, not particularly lower, but extremely dull. Pigs weighing 130 to 150 pounds went from $10.50@11; 110 to 125 pounds from $10@10.50 and 100 pounds and down all the way from $7.50@10, according to kind. Rough hogs strong to 25c higher, bulk of sows bringing $9.50@9.60, with some good lights up to $9.75.

SHEEP—Lamb market remained steady, with $16 the top, and bulk of sales from $15.75 to that figure. Sheep, however, advanced in a strong, active trade, and three double decks of Colorado ewes sold at $9, the highest price in almost two years. Other ewes sold from $7@8, being of rather plain quality. Supply was fair, being estimated at 2000, and quality was for the most part good. Values on all grades are at the year's high point.

HORSES AND MULES—The horse market opened the week on a strong and active basis, with Eastern classes regaining virtually all of the decline of the previous week. Comparatively light receipts and a broad demand influenced the improvement. The mule run for the two days shows a moderate total and selling averages steady to a shade easier.

LOWER RANGE TO WHEAT ON CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO, March 7.—Wheat underwent a material setback in price today during the early trading, sellers having an advantage because of an unlooked for decline at Liverpool. Besides, crop reports from the Southwest were of a favorable character. Fields which had appeared dead were reported as showing a noticeable revival. Opening quotations, which varied from ⅝c to 1⅝c lower, with May $1.42 to $1.42¾ and July $1.20½ to $1.21, were followed by a moderate further drop and then something of a rally.

Subsequently the market here showed rather stubborn resistance to selling pressure, considering that the Liverpool market was down 3⅛d to 3¾d, and that selling there on a large scale was reported. The closing in Chicago was unsettled, 1⅝c to 2c net lower, with May $1.41⅝ to $1.14¾ and July $1.19¾ to $1.20.

Corn and oats went downward in price with wheat. After opening ¼@⅝c to 1c lower, May 63¾c to 64c, the corn market continued weak for a while and then recovered to some extent.

White corn went to a premium over yellow and mixed. The close was steady at ⅜@½c to 1c net decline: May, 63¾c to 63⅞c.

Oats displayed independence of other grains. There was said to be liberal export dealings in oats at the Seaboard. The opening ranged from ¼c off to a like advance, May at 41⅛c to 41¼c, but sharp gains ensued for all deliveries.

Slight upturns in the value of hogs were promptly reflected by the provision market.

This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone. Mix fresh as wanted.

Wheat futures opened lower, May at $1.37 to $1.37½ and July wheat $1.16½, and although some buying followed the decline prices did not get back to last night in the early session. Wheat at Liverpool opened ⅜d higher and then held off 2½d. More favorable comment on Southwest crop was received. Winnipeg was down 1c to 2c early. Corn opened with May at 61¾c, July 65c and September 66½c. A better tone than opening was later shown.

The three Northwestern markets combined today had 1032 cars of wheat, compared with 565 a week ago and 909 last year, Minneapolis today receiving 248 cars, Duluth 73 and Winnipeg 711.

COTTON FUTURES ARE HIGHER IN TRADING AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 7.—Firmer Liverpool cables, accompanied by better Manchester advices and reports that heavy Eastern belt rains were delaying new crop preparations seemed responsible for an opening advance of 17 to 19 points in the cotton market today. There was buying by brokers with Wall Street, New Orleans and domestic trade connections, but the advance to 18.16c for May and 17.43c for July met considerable realizing. There also was scattered Southern selling which caused reactions of 9 to 10 points from th best shortly after the call. Private cables reported spinners calling cotton in Liverpool and that there was a little better business in cotton goods at Manchester.

Fluctuations were rather irregular later, there were continued reports of improving trade conditions in England and bullish advices regarding the effects of heavy rains in the Eastern belt. These advices, however, failed to stimulate much buying after the early advance and prices gradually eased off from the best under realizing. The midday market ruled around $18.02 for May and $17.34 for July or about 9 to 17 points net higher on the general list with new crop positions relatively firm on reports of delayed crop preparations.

Trading was quiet during the middle of the afternoon with the market easing off to 17.99c for May or about 17 points from the early high level and within 6 points or last night's closing.

Spot cotton quiet; middling, 18.50c.

Cotton futures closed barely steady; March, 18.16c; May, 17.90c; July, 17.21c; Oct., 16.63c; Dec., 16.44c.

Liverpool Cotton Firm.

LIVERPOOL, March 7.—Cotton spot in good demand but business moderate; prices firm. Good middling, 10.91; fully middling, 10.56; middling, 10.31; low middling, 9.41; good ordinary, 8.56; ordinary 8.06. Sales 7000 bales, including 5800 American. Receipts, 6000 bales, all American. F. J. K.—All the High Schools in St. Louis have evening classes of instruction. The only elementary schools open at night are the Franklin, the Madison, the Glasgow and the Patrick Henry.

MRS. LALA.—If thoroughly washing the flannel with a good soap will not remove the medicine stains we can suggest nothing further. Acids would no doubt rot or harm the material.

M. L.—The following are the newspapers of Alaskan cities having the largest circulation: Anchorage-Times, Juneau-Empire, Skagway-Alaskan. For information regarding the rates of advertising write addressing the manager of the papers or apply to the local advertising agencies.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

T. L. B.—Consult a lawyer.

W. J. E.—You are entitled to the Missouri bonus.

BROWN EYES.—The woman can make her husband pay for the divorce if he deserted her. She should postpone going out with other men until she has obtained her divorce.

DICK.—The Judge in the Circuit Court will naturally be informed of the decision of the Probate Court. The party involved in the will should consult a lawyer if he has not already done so.

S. L. I. X.—It is unlawful to wear a secret order emblem if you are not a member, if the emblem is worn with intent to defraud as for the purpose of obtaining money, aid, assistance or other valuable things.

MRS. T. L.—If you have paid in full and have records to prove it they cannot collect from you, even though they should sue you. Explain the circumstances to them, if you have not already done so.

M. G. C.—(1) No license is necessary for a raffle for the benefit of a club. (2) No law prohibits a "mystery club" of the nature you describe. (3) A license to run a dance hall costs $30, $80 or $150, according to the size of the room.

B. K.—Interest on Liberty bonds and on United States Treasury certificates is exempt from the Missouri income tax. Interest on United States Treasury certificates is exempt from the normal Federal income tax, but not from the surtax.

KYLSPIDOUGL.—We do not know whether the company your husband works for would compel him to support you or not. ~~You can sue in~~ court and obtain a decree for separate maintenance, which will make him support you. He will then have to pay the costs of your suit.

MRS. N. N.—The widow is entitled to a life interest in 1-3 of the real property left by her husband. Until this has been assigned to her she can remain in the home without rent. The widow is also entitled to 1-3 of the personal property.

WORRIED.—The landlady having been ordered by the police to tell the tenants to move, can notify them without assigning any reason, and will not expose herself to a libel or slander action by doing this. She is entitled to rent for the time they remain in possession.

A. B.—Missouri now pays a pension of $300 per year to blind persons who have been residents of Missouri for 10 years or more or who lost their sight while bona fide residents of Missouri, provided that such persons have an income of less than $780. Write the Commission for the Blind, at Jefferson City, or apply to the Judge of the Probate Court here in St. Louis.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT.—A girl of 18 can obtain a marriage license in Illinois, even though she does not live there. The marriage cannot be annulled on the ground that the parties have not lived together for six months from the date of the marriage.

BOX 4 201.—You can file your objections to the administrator's actions in the Probate Court and ask to have him removed. A will can be filed for probate after six months have elapsed. The Court may or may not admit it to probate. You can sell your real estate. We are not sure that we understand your third question. You should consult an attorney, even though you think their charges are high.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

M.—We judge the condition described is what is known as "milium," little cysts under the skin caused by retention of secretion in a sebaceous gland. They may be shelled out after a superficial incision or punctured with a fine needle attached to a negative pole of a galvanic battery.

MIKE.—The chances of recovery in diabetes varies with the age at which the disease makes its appearance, the time allowed to elapse before treatment and the treatment itself. Once thoroughly established, early in life, or before 25 years of age, recovery is unlikely, but if treatment is instituted early much may be done to avert the end. It is a disease which never gets well of itself and always gets worse if not properly treated. At the same time mild cases, amenable to treatment, are in the majority. Appearing after middle life in fat persons, early recognized and promptly treated, it is usually easily controlled. It is rarely safe to consider a case of diabetes entirely cured and a close watch should be maintained once the condition has been recognized.

"Out of Nowhere"

A NEW ROMANCE

By Ruby Ayres

CHAPTER XXIII.

"How dare you, how dare you!" she panted at him. "You've lied to me and cheated me long enough, and now you've successfully robbed me of all I ever wanted. We need not keep up the game. Do you think I ever really cared for you? Do you think I wanted to meet you, and go out with you? I hated and despised you all the time for your presumption in imagining I did. I only did it for Ronnie's sake, to keep Ronnie. I knew you were trying to find him. I know all about the woman you deserted. I knew he was your child, and I thought—I thought if I could make you care for me you would let me keep him. I was a fool—a fool!"

Hastings went very white; for a moment he started at her without speaking; he was beginning to understand slowly that she was perfectly aware of what she was saying; her last words had been only too clear to him; they held the stamp of truth; he knew she had meant them; the rest he did not consider.

"You mean that you—never cared in the least for me?" he asked; he spoke with difficulty—once or twice he moistened his lips as if his words were hard to frame. "You mean that—you—were—just pretending—for some reason of your own? Is that what I am to understand?"

"Yes, I was just playing, as you were; just playing; I thought I was winning, but I was mistaken; all along I was mistaken; you have won, won all along, and robbed me of the only happiness I have ever wanted. I will never forgive you. I never want to see you again; go away, oh, go away."

Hastings did not move; he looked as if he were turned to stone; there was something very boyish and pathetic about his face.

Violet had sunk into a chair; her head had fallen forward onto her outstretched arms.

Hastings stooped and raised her head with gentle force; raised it till he could see her eyes, then——

"You never loved me—at all?" he asked slowly.

For an instant she did not reply; her eyes seemed to be taking in every detail of his white, incredulous face.

"Love you!" she echoed between her teeth. "If you only knew how I hate you, I hate you." Her eyes were distraught; a disinterested onlooker would have guessed that she hardly knew what she was saying.

Hastings flung up his clenched hands to his eyes. For an instant his tall figure swayed as if some giant hand had dealt him a blow; then without another word or look he turned and left the room. The door closed behind him with hollow finality.

Mrs. Higgs, having served the steak to her best lodger, crept up into the narrow hall to have a look at the grand motor car chugging at her gate; she had never before seen such a beauty at such close proximity; she was admiring it, and proudly thinking what a superior "bone" it lent to her establishment, when a man came down the narrow stairs behind her two at a time and dashed past her without a word or look. As she afterward told Olive Hale, in a burst of inquisitive confidence—"He looked as if the old gentleman hisself was after him!"

He flung himself into the waiting car, and drove off without a backward glance.

"Well, I niver!" said Mrs. Higgs. Her one eye stared in alarm down the deserted road; she went indoors slowly and climbed the stairs; she felt concerned for Violet; it looked mysterious, having such a swell visitor who made such a hurried exit.

She knocked at Violet's door, but getting no answer, climbed a further flight to Olive Hale.

Olive was trying on a frock; she was twisting and turning in front of the glass critically.

Mrs. Higgs closed the door behind her and sat down heavily on a chair.

"There's something the matter with Miss H'Ingleby," she said impressively. "Did you see the car, Miss 'Ale?"

Miss Hale said "What?" not very interestedly. The skirt did not hang so well as she had hoped; it gave her serious annoyance.

Mrs. Higgs explained. She could be graphic when she chose. She gave a very exaggerated account of Violet's visitor and his abrupt departure; she earnestly begged Miss Hale to accompany her downstairs to see if all was well.

Olive agreed with alacrity; she had heard the car in the street outside, but had not dreamed of connecting it with Mrs. Higgs' unpretentious abode. She ran down the stairs eagerly, followed by the landlady. She did not wait to knock at Violet's door; she turned the handle and entered, closing it sharply in the face of Mrs. Higgs' curiosity; occasionally she deemed it advisable to keep Mrs. Higgs in her place.

After a few moments she came out; Mrs. Higgs was sitting on the stairs, with an aggrieved expression in her one eye.

"She's all right," said Olive. "I've put her to bed; she's upset about the kid. It appears that the man who called was Ronald Hastings, the man who took him away this morning."

Mrs. Higgs bounced up from the shabby stair carpet.

"That he never was," she said emphatically. "And I ought to know, asking your pardon, Miss, seeing that I saw him with my own eyes." Mrs. Higgs always alluded to her optic in the plural.

"It wasn't the same?" Olive asked the question sharply. "Are you quite sure it wasn't?"

"Sure! Don't I look sure?" demanded Mrs. Higgs with a sniff. "I've niver seen the gentleman what came in the car this evening before—but I 'ave seen the one what took Master Ronnie away, bless his pretty face; leastwise I've seen his photo and that's the one that's stood on Miss Ingleby's mantel shelf ever since she's bin 'ere."

* * *

Florrie Jones was feeling particulary happy and pleased with herself; her temper had distinctly improved; she was not nearly so ready to say sharp and unkind things; she was more obliging; she actually forgot to grumble when Madame requested she should stay late at Violette's.

Madame wondered; she thought probably Florrie Jones was not well; she herself was always better tempered when she felt poorly; she judged other people accordingly.

As a matter of fact, the explanation was simple—Florrie Jones was in love, and her whole life seemed reconstructed in consequence.

She was on the wrong side of 30, and she had never before had a love affair of any shape or description.

It had been a most romantic affair; going homewards from Violette's one evening she had lost her purse; she had never discovered the loss until the 'bus conductor had come for the fare; and at the end of a hopeless and agitated search she had looked up in distress to meet the rather amused and sympathetic gaze of a man on the opposite seat.

He was a tall man, smartly dressed—too smartly, the critical might have complained, but Florrie Jones thought him perfection.

He wore a gray suit, immaculately creased, and a gray bowled hat poised at a most fascinating angle; there was a single carnation in his buttonhole and white spats over his patent leather shoes.

When he met her gaze he smiled; it was a friendly, overfamiliar smile, but Florrie Jones responded to it immediately.

"I have lost my purse," she said impulsively.

The conductor stood scratching his head and tapping an impatient foot; he had heard of lost purses before and was inclined to be incredulous.

The man in the gray bowler thrust a white, useless looking hand into a pocket.

"If you will allow me." He produced a sixpence.

The conductor took it nonchalantly; it did not matter in the least to him who paid as long as somebody did; he punched the ticket counted the change and departed.

The man in the gray bowler changed his seat to a vacant one beside Florrie Jones. She was overwhelming in her thanks; she explained over and over again that she had never been so careless before; she confided to him that there had been a sovereign and some coppers in the purse; she asked if he thought she would ever get it back? The man was polite and sympathetic; he said he was afraid her property had gone for good; he said that London was full of dishonest people. He might with truth have added that he was in a position to know, seeing that he was dishonest himself. By the time they parted they were excellent friends. He gave her his address, at a swell West End hotel, so that she might soothe her conscience and return him his tuppence. She gave him hers—at Violette's. She thought it sounded better than the third-rate boarding house which her mother and sister kept down at Clapham.

She walked home the rest of the way treading on air. She dreamed all night of the way he had raised the gray bowler when he left her. She thought his name—Alfred Sutore—was simply divine! She wondered when they would meet again. It was a tremendously agreeable surprise to find him waiting for her the next evening outside the side entrance at Violette's. She blushed and fluttered when he spoke to her. She wished all the other girls could see what a smart man she had got hold of. When he produced a bunch of roses and handed them to her with one of his charmingly worded speeches she thought herself a Queen.

Every woman in love is a Queen for a day. The lover is her devoted courtier. The world her kingdom. Florrie Jones' day was destined to be a very short one, but she lived every hour of it.

They went on country excursions together. He told her incidents—more or less correct—of his life. He said he came of a good family, which was true. He said he had money, which was a lie. Florrie Jones believed him implicitly. She thought herself the luckiest girl in the world. She spent half a sovereign on having her hair dressed in new styles to see which best became her. She bought a black ostrich feather which she could not afford because Sutore said he thought them the most graceful trimming for a woman's hat. She was blindly and absurdly in love, and believed him to be the same.

As a matter of fact he was merely playing a game—a game of which he knew every single rule. He loved admiration. He was like a vain woman—he believed himself irresistible to the opposite sex.

UNCOMMON SENSE

THE PRICE OF POPULARITY.

By JOHN BLAKE.

It is pleasant to have your friends number legion, but it is seldom profitable.

It is delightful to be hailed everywhere as a desirable companion, but it usually proves that you spend so much time being a desirable companion that you neglect your work.

The men of wide popularity have little in life to enjoy save the popularity. And that does not last very long.

If you really want to get on in the world you will be kept so busy that you will have time to make only a few intimate friends.

These few intimate friends are worth an army of acquaintances who like you merely because you are willing to spend your time entertaining them.

If you spend eight hours a day at your job, and three or four more hours in occupations calculated to make you more competent at your job, your opportunities for acquiring popularity will be extremely limited.

It is a good plan to leave the entertainment of the multitude to actors and other people who are paid for that purpose. They do it better than amateurs. It is their business to capitalize popularity. The more they get the better off they are.

These people are comparatively few.

Unless you are one of them, it will be of more profit to you to be popular with your boss, or your patients, or your clients, or your customers than with "hosts of friends."

The liking of the hosts of friends for you may be sincere enough, but it will have very little value.

And to keep it you will have to present them with your time, which is the only thing in the world which you have as much of as anybody else.

Successful men are seldom "prominent clubmen" or brilliant figures in society.

They get their success by sticking to their work, and they frequently grow very unpopular with unsuccessful people whom they pass in the race.

Stick to your job, make a few friends, and forget about popularity. It is a frail reed on which to lean, at best.

Fashion News Notes

NEW YORK.—After exhausting about every other material in search of ornamentation, the fashion makers have now turned to wood with an enthusiasm calculated to make the chips fly. Wearing a chip on one's shoulder is the correct thing to do at the moment, and the shoulder chip is supplemented with other chips and splinters scattered hither and yon upon gown or suit, lacquered in green or dragon's blood, thin squares and disks of wood have been pressed into service as ornaments. They follow closely in the wooden beads and balls used as dress trimmings. Some of the silk crepe parasols for spring made in shades to match both hat and gown, are decocated with lacquered bits of wood and have wooden handles, also lacquered.

LONDON.—No doubt it is partly due to Princess Mary's choice for larkspur and orchid evening gowns. But whatever the direct cause, the glad truth is apparent that London young girls refuse any longer to be shrouded in white or palled in black at evening parties. In spite of the black or white dictum from Paris, the debutantes here are insisting on pastel shades for evening wear, with a decided leaning toward richer and brighter tones than the strictly pastel range affords. There is a very lovely new shade, deep and mellow, known as cyclamen pink. This is used in combination with pewter toned beads and sleeves or with silver. Other shades that daily increase in popularity include fuchsia, geranium, magenta combined with silver, and the deeper orchid tints.

AMERICAN WOMAN THE MOST BE UTIFUL

Irish Novelist Says Paint and Powder uin He

Shaw Desmond Thinks Miss America Destroys Natural Attractiveness

Painting Destroys Expression, Which Is the Thing That Fascinates, Noted Sociologist Declares.

By SHAW DESMOND.

I AM going to start with the assertion that nature has made the American woman, with her lithe figure, her fine, free manner, her vivacity and, above all, her youth and her splendid camaraderie, perhaps the most beautiful woman on earth; that she mars her natural beauty by her wrong use of powder, paint and perfume; that she orders and wears her clothes without regard to their suitability and only with regard to their "fashionableness," and that the North American habits of life generally are in constant war with feminine beauty.

What the American woman sometimes forgets is that beauty is not only a question of body but of soul. It is the soul of a woman, showing in the expression of her face, and especially in her eyes, which gives her individuality and beauty.

When cheeks are heavily encarmined, when eyebrows and lashes are heavily penciled, all those fine lines of expression which, scintillating, make "expression" what it is are painted over and obscured. It is just "painting beauty out."

"Painting Beauty Out."

The beauties of Babylon and Egypt, of Persia and Rome, all preceded those of New York and San Francisco in an effort to become beautiful by painting the face. But they only succeeded in painting beauty out. And it is to be remembered, in passing, that in all these civilizations the use of the cosmetic was at its highest at the time of their greatest decadence. But Miss Columbia, praises be, is still too young to be decadent.

And then there is the American male. The American male is more chivalrous toward his womenfolk than any European male of them all. With that "human," idealist quality which makes the American, whatever be his station, one of the world's first gentlemen, as he is the world's first democrat, he speaks of his wife or sister or sweetheart with a quiet pride that is inexpressibly touching. He just loves to adorn his womenfolk with jewels, bought in the marketplace by the sweat of brain and body. He defers to the American woman in all matters intellectual, saying constantly to the stranger within the gate, whether lecturer or writer: "Oh, you go and talk it over with my wife." She knows all about those things."

(It may be, of course, that his chivalry isn't chivalry at all, but just a tradition coming down from the days when in a country that even still is in course of settlement women were rare, and therefore prized. Only I don't think so.)

But, and it is a great big "but," I sometimes think I miss from his looks the ardent romance of the Frenchman or Irishman or even Englishman. Men over here tell me that it is because: "We men haven't time for lovemaking. It takes all our time to make money." Few American males know how to make love.

That seems a pity, for lovemaking is the most important thing in the world.

But I wonder is it only that? May it not be because the American woman, with all her beauty, deliberately obliterates that subtlety of expression of face and form which is as delicate as the bloom on the peach and as easily destroyed, and so fails to fascinate?

The Need of Fascination.

"Fascinate me!" I overheard a well-known New York theatrical producer say one day to his wife. His voice was challenging and complaining. All men like to be fascinated. All women, at heart, want to fascinate. The reason that America has so many divorces is that women are ceasing to fascinate and to be fascinated by their husbands. And so they seek outside for the fascination, the romance, for which they long.

The American woman is starving for romance.

When I paid my first visit to America three years ago I was both horrified and fascinated. Both my horrification and fascination found their origin in Fifth avenue, that "Street of Banners" which is one of the world's most beautiful highways, all aglow with color as it then was. I was horrified by the number of obviously beautiful and refined women who walked unblushingly (incidentally, the painted cheek can never blush) in the light of day with painted cheeks and penciled eyebrows. I was fascinated by a revelation in variegated womanhood—for the American feminine is bewildering in its complexity of body and soul.

Now the beautiful American lady sometimes fails to fascinate me because she will not let me see her real self. I don't want to fall in love with an image. Like any other decent man, I want to see the original. If this naturally lovely creature will insist upon covering her face with powder and paint, then I must only cultivate a "crush" on cosmetics, and I might just as well do what a young man once did in London.

This unhappy young man fell in love with a painted wax model in the windows of a famous Regent street house—a lovely lady with a revel of blond curls, and eyes to rival the cerulean. Each day Jenkins (it was not his real name) would gaze enthralled upon the painted face and baby-doll eyes of his charmer, until that fatal day when he saw Snookins, the shopwalker, enter the window where the lady stood, place his indifferent arm about her unresisting waist and bear her away. In a moment Jenkins had hurled himself through the window in an attempt to get at Snookins, and now lives comfortably in Hanwell lunatic asylum. And, anyhow, only a lunatic could love paint.

Now, I am not built like Jenkins. I am built like Snookins. I defy any woman, however beautiful by nature, once she has "touched herself up," to make me feel anything more to her than Mr. Snookins felt to the wax model. I simply can't be fascinated by powder, paint and perfume. Men don't really like them—at least, decent men. Some males "of the baser sort" may like them in the strange woman, but what wife will want to compete with her!

A certain European Queen, and, before she had spoiled her skin with cosmetics, one of the most beautiful women in Europe, went one better, or worse, than paint. She took to enamel.

Once, looking upon this lady at a public function, I was paralyzed, after hearing so much of her natural beauty, to see before me a sort of glassy automaton. She dared not smile for fear of cracking the enamel.

Fortunately, the American beauty can still smile through her paint. And it is that beautiful, human smile which in flashes makes me forget the paint and only remember, or try to remember, the really beautiful, intelligent creature behind. Thank God! the loveliness that is America's has not yet taken to enamel and smilelessness.

If Not Dyed Hair, Why Dyed Face?

And is it not queer, when you come to think of it, that the fair American who will let that beautiful hair of hers turn snow-white—and the combination of snow-white hair and young face is a fascinating combination that is peculiarly American—will not hestiate to paint the face underneath? If not dyed hair, then why dyed face? But the sex always was illogical!

Another thing for which we may thank the gods of the beautiful—the fair American has not yet become perverse in her painting. One of the recent fashions in Paris was to stain the face a bronze and then sprinkle it over with gold dust, giving in the sunlight an effect inexpressibly bizarre. The difference between the French woman and the American is that the former does not even try to imitate nature. The American, because younger and more innocent, thinks she can imitate nature and get away with it.

But she can't. Nature cannot be imitated in the human face; simply because "expression" makes the face what it is and painting reduces all faces to a dead level. The art of face painting, at least, is not one of those in which "art becomes nature."

As I write I can hear the fair reader, now thoroughly incensed, exclaim: "But have you never seen any painted ladies in Europe?"

But what has old, decadent Europe, becoming more and more of a harridan, to do with young, beautiful Miss America?

And, anyhow, I have never seen such a general use of paint in any European capital as, for instance, in New York, and I certainly have never seen in the Old World the sight which met my astonished eyes in that city, the sight of a girls' school in one of the big avenues, some of the pupils of which had rouged their faces and reddened their lips in a manner to shame the light of day.

One of the leaders of New York society, herself a beautiful young matron, told me recently she had been compelled to say to a schoolgirl niece of hers who, unashamed, had presented herself at the house of her aunt with a liberal application of "No. 2" on her cheeks: "When you have uncovered your face by taking the paint away I shall be happy to be seen with you in the streets." "Since the war," she said, "a large majority of my girl acquaintances use cosmetics."

When one meets European beauty under paint one feels that it falls in with inherent cussedness of things entire. When one meets paint in America, one wonders to what America is coming, thinks of the Pilgrim Fathers—and mothers—and hopes for the best, for in America paint, normal in Europe, becomes abnormal; seems, in fact, a sort of crime against nature.

(A pertinent aside here. Boston, where there is less paint than in any city in the world, seems to regard Fifth avenue with horror, and that part of "the intellectual mainspring of America" which is non-Irish, being pragmatist, justifies the aforesaid horror by pointing with subtly concealed pride to the wonderful New England complexion. Now, New York sneers at New England, while New England just "condescends" to New York—but, as a New England dame put it pithily: "The New York woman sneers because she is uneasy in her conscience on account of her cosmetics!" When, rushing in where angels fear to tread, I ventured to suggest to the Boston fair that New York and the Pride of New England should kiss and make friends, I regret to say that the suggestion was met by a freezing "Thank you! We don't want any paint on our cheeks!" Well, well!)

Carl Ewald, the great Danish author, was wont to say, "No woman is worth making love to until she has reached the age of 35." Some of the famous French beauties, like Mme. de Maintenon, who, incidentally, attributed her beauty to the use of water instead of paint, only reached the fullness of their charms when they had passed that 40 mark which women so foolishly dread. And how refreshing are all these truths in these days of unfledged flapperdom!

Thirty-Five—Beauty's High Mark.

A woman should be at the height of her beauty at 35 to 40, instead, as in New York, for example, of being so often passe, faded, after 30. The woman of 30 whose mirror tells her that the beauty of 10 years before is passing has only herself to blame. In nine cases out of 10 it is due to cosmetics, where worry is not the cause.

Why is it that the American woman, particularly the woman in America's "Main streets," seems to lose her grip on life and beauty around about the "30 mark"? I believe she does so simply because life for her then begins to lose its "snap." One is quite willing to admit that the fault is not always hers. There is nothing so likely to make womanhood lovely as love itself—and the American man sometimes forgets flesh and blood for Wall street or oil, and paint is not likely to help him to remember it. Despite the superstition of the wife, men don't like painted faces. And yet, extraordinary as it may sound, even Wall street is not quite so beautiful as a beautiful woman.

And almost any woman can be made beautiful by loving and being loved.

But even allowing for the wear and tear of Wall street and Main street—and one does not have to leave either New York or London itself to find Main street—in no country is there so little excuse for faded beauty as America, where labor saving appliances, from telephones to electric dishwashers, have been brought to such a perfection that even the ancient Greeks, with their slaves, had nothing "on" the machines of America. Aristotle wrote that neither beauty nor art could be developed without slaves. Miss America has the machine instead of the slave. Let her be beautiful!

Now I just hate "to get cross with" the American woman, at whose throne I pay my homage—but then I just can't help it. I love her so much (collectively, of course) that I am compelled to scold her on those points where it seems to me she falls short in one of the first duties of every woman, after she has washed the baby and set her maids to their daily tasks, and that is the duty of fascination. (Incidentally, men should also be fascinators—of course, of their own wives—but, as Kipling would say, that is another story.) And no woman is going to fascinate so long as her life is one long working day—and so it is that many overworked or overworried Americans of the weaker but more persistent sex fly to the rouge box and the powder puff for the fascination which should come from love and the joy of life.

The positive, comparative and superlative, or the "bad, worse, worst," of what are most inaccurately known as "beauty preparations" are perfume, powder and paint, in order named, with a slight reservation, to follow, in favor of the first two.

The perfume is the positive—for it is positively stated by all women that "a little perfume is only natural." When we come to powder we reach in individual cases the hesitancy of comparison, for I know quite a number of fair Americans who will perfume their clothes, but hesitate at powdering their nose. As for paint—and how blatant the word sounds!—we may thank heaven in all piety that there are still a few dainty Americans who, using a soupcon of perfume, or even powder, will stop at the superlative of paint.

Now, let us examine the claim of powder and innocuousness.

It is true that a dab of a "shiny nose" reduces the But such noses are, al apt to be red, and then organ looks like a straw in cream, as indeed I ha in chaste Fifth avenue are no shiny noses in B how, there's a much b dealing with shininess rubbing with a little p leather, which can be

But even where the features are ust "touched up" by powder deli ately administered by the hands of the artist, I still claim that it de troys the very essence of a beautiful kin, and that is its "life." The ath e knows when he has reached the nk of condition by the satiny heen of his skin—in a word, by its life and vitality. How much more will the delicate skin of a woman in dicate her vitality—and therefore her fascination! Dusting it with powder causes it to lose at once its "living" quality and its charm, for powder chokes the pores, causing, as a great Wimpole street dermatologist said to me last summer, the horror of "the open pore," or, as he called it, "the open door," making the cuticle dull and ugly.

How many American women can face the light of day without showing "the parchment skin." Those who can pass the test will almost invariably be found to be those who sidestep powder.

Perfume is a much more debatable subject. A slight suspicion of "white rose" or other delicate odor certainly enhances the attractiveness of a woman. But what of the heavy Oriental scents, such as treble incarnat, affected by so many American women?

We have all of us been in American drawing rooms scented like a harem—not many, fortunately. To enter such rooms is to court anesthesia. And it is a fact that every healthy beautiful woman has her own individual perfume—something that should never be hidden by the heavy artificiality of the "incarnate" scents, which is but to hide the spirit with the flesh.

I never realized the essential loveliness of American womanhood until I visited a certain school for girls in the Cooperstown district. There I found 150 of the most beautiful girls in the world, varying from 16 to 20. They seemed to fill the spacious rooms through which they moved with a light that seemed to pour from their lithe young bodies and radiant faces. Neither powder nor paint is permitted in that nursery of loveliness—the result being a bewildering revelation of beauty.

The "Exteriorization" Menace.

"Exteriorization" is the danger with which American womanhood is threatened. Few Americans seem to realize that beauty is something that unfolds like a flower from within, not something that is superimposed from without. Still fewer understand that beauty is much more a question of "soul" than mere regularity of feature—which latter, indeed, is the beauty of the Ziegfeld show girl. And yet many fair Americans seem unconsciously to emulate the "show girl" by the "exteriorization" of paint and powder and the heaping on of costly clothes and jewels.

In nothing is this course of exteriorization shown more than in the American woman's clothes, which, individually, are often beautiful enough, but the ensemble too often staggering.

The American woman, like the Scandinavian and the Russian, who have developed their own fashions, should go to America for her fashions, rather than to London or Paris. Clothes are only beautiful when they suit the psychology of the wearer. Now the psychology of the American is not that of the Parisienne or the Viennese. Then, for heaven's sake, let us have American fashions and American "lines" for Americans.

I do not know a sight more depressing than to walk the length of any fashionable street in almost any Eastern American city and note the extraordinary conglomeration of clothes worn by the leaders of fashion.

Once more, the American woman has almost no peer in natural beauty. The day that she uses a modicum of powder and perfume and eschews paint in every shape and form—the day that she "creates" and wears American instead of Parisian clothes—that day will show her to the world as the world's most beautiful woman.

The Heart of a Girl

A Story of Romance and a Business Career in St. Louis

By Caroline Crawford

PERCY PETERSON.

CHAPTER 80.

NO girl's life is complete without a "Percy," or a "Clarence," an "Oswald" or a "Cyril." They simply have to happen in every girl's list of acquaintances. And in 99 times out of a hundred they are Apollos, Greek gods with golden curly hair or dark wavy ringlets. Yes, the kind every girl likes to run her fingers through! They are always good dressers, good talkers, love to read poetry and usually play the violin or piano.

Peggy found her "Percy" in the office. He was the young man who had taken Billy Bracton's place while the latter went to Chicago. He was the man Billy wrote about, saying, "A perfect Adonis has taken my place, but you won't lose your heart to him because he's a nut."

As Peggy thought of Percy Peterson later she smiled. Billy was right. He was a nut and she knew it. And yet he was just the type of nut with whom girls frequently fell head over heels in love, took long rambles in the country, read Indian poetry and sang love songs.

She had just finished her phone conversation with Jack Reed when she turned around and faced Percy Peterson for the first time. He was calm and cool and handsome. Knowing that he had overheard most of her conversation, she was flustered and crimson.

"I beg pardon," he pleaded, "while I may seem to have been intruding I was making notes on the margin of my paper. This is Miss Peggy Dayton, is it not?"

Peggy smiled and nodded.

"I am Percy Peterson," the young man announced (he was a regular Gibson man, tall, artistic and graceful). "I have taken young Bracton's place."

"I—I knew Mr. Bracton very well," Peggy found herself saying, but in reality she was thinking, "What a beautiful woman he would have made, tall, willowy, with black curly hair and violet eyes. He is handsome, almost perfect with his clear cut cameo features, but he is almost too good looking for a man."

"I never had the pleasure of meeting Bracton," continued Percy Peterson, "but I hope I can live up to his reputation as a business man. They call him a wizard around here."

The Adonis turned about and walked sedately away. Peggy discovered that her typewriter had been put in order and began merrily tapping away at it. But before she had completed her first letter Percy returned.

"I don't want to seem as if I were forcing my acquaintance upon you, Miss Dayton," he began, "but I have a little book of poems which I would like to loan to you. They are some Hindu poems which I think you will enjoy as much as I did."

While riding home in the subway that evening Peggy turned to the little book of poems. The first two or three stanzas she read thrilled her with their delicate touch of romance and their vivid pen pictures of nature.

Later that evening when she sat beside Jack Reed during an intermission at a musical comedy she drew forth the volume and began reading some of the poems to him.

Jack shook his head and held up his hand for her to stop.

"Take it away; I hate poetry," he declared, "it's for highbrows, but I like good limericks. Listen to this one:

"In the drinking well,
Which the plumber built her,
Aunt Eliza fell;
We must buy a filter."

Peggy laughed until the tears came into her eyes, but on the way home as she considered the square-set chin of Jack Reed and his abrupt, businesslike manner, she wondered if she liked this type of young man as well as the Adonis, Percy Peterson type, who was sentimental and appreciated the "finer things in life."

No. 55—The Magnetic Fountain Pen.

HERE is a simple experiment in physics, which is not known to most people, and, as a result, makes an effective little trick.

Take a fountain pen and rub it on the coatsleeve, very quickly, under the edge of the table. Lay a very tiny bit of paper on the table, and approach it with the fountain pen. The electricity rubbed in the pen will attract the paper just as a magnet attracts soft iron, and will lift it clear of the table.

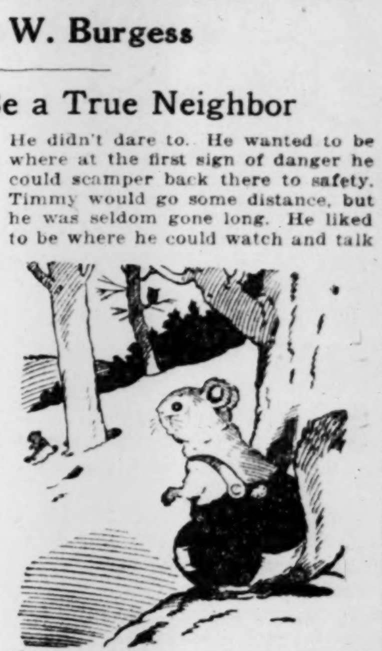
Timmy Proves to Be a True Neighbor

OCCASIONALLY Timmy the Flying Squirrel came over to visit Whitefoot the Wood Mouse. If Whitefoot was in his house he always knew when Timmy arrived. He would hear a soft thump down near the bottom of the tall stump in which he made his home. He would know instantly that that thump was made by Timmy striking the foot of the stump after a long jump from the top of a tree. Whitefoot would poke his head out of his doorway and there, sure enough, would be Timmy scrambling up toward him.

Whitefoot had grown to admire Timmy with all his might. It seemed to him that Timmy was the most wonderful of all the people he knew. You see, there was no one of the others who could jump as Timmy could. Timmy on his part enjoyed having Whitefoot for a neighbor. Few of the little people of the Green Forest are more timid than Timmy the Flying Squirrel, but here was one beside whom Timmy actually felt bold. It was such a new feeling that Timmy enjoyed it.

So it was that in the dusk of early evening just after the Black Shadows had come creeping out from the Purple Hills across the Green Meadows and through the Green Forest these two little neighbors would start out to hunt for food. Whitefoot never went far from the tall, dead stump in which he was now living. He didn't dare to. He wanted to be where at the first sign of danger he could scamper back there to safety. Timmy would go some distance, but he was seldom gone long. He liked to be where he could watch and talk with Whitefoot. You see, Timmy is very much like other people; he likes to gossip a little.



"It's no business of mine," said Timmy to himself.

One evening Whitefoot had found it hard work to get enough to fill his stomach. He had kept going a little further and a little further from that old stump. Finally he was further from it than he had ever been before. Timmy had filled his stomach, and from near the top of a tree was watching Whitefoot. Suddenly what seemed like a great Black Shadow floated right over the tree in which Timmy was sitting, and stopped on the top of a tall, dead tree. It was Hooty the Owl, and it was simply good fortune that Timmy happened to see him. Timmy kept perfectly still. He knew that Hooty didn't know that he was there. Unless he moved, those great eyes of Hooty's, wonderful as they were, would not see him.

Timmy looked over to where he had last seen Whitefoot. There he was, picking out seeds from a pine cone on the ground. The trunk of a tree was between him and Hooty the Owl. But Timmy knew that Whitefoot hadn't seen Hooty, and that any minute he might run out from behind that tree. If he did Hooty would see him, and silently as a shadow would swoop down and catch him. What was to be done?

"It's no business of mine," said Timmy to himself. "Whitefoot must look out for himself. It is no business of mine at all. Perhaps Hooty will fly away before Whitefoot moves. I don't want anything to happen to Whitefoot, but if something does it will be his own fault; he should keep better watch."

For a few minutes nothing happened. Then Whitefoot finished the last seed in that cone and started to look for more. Timmy knew that in a moment Hooty would see Whitefoot. What do you think Timmy did. He jumped. Yes, sir, he jumped. Down, down, down, straight past the tree on which sat Hooty the Owl. Timmy sailed. Hooty saw him, of course. He couldn't help but see him. He spread his great wings and was after Timmy in an instant. Timmy struck near the foot of a tree and without wasting a second darted around to the other side. He was just in time. Hooty was already reaching for him. Up the tree ran Timmy and jumped again. Again Hooty was too late. And so Timmy led Hooty the Owl away from Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

Better than jewels

Take a lesson from Cleopatra

With a world of ancient beauty arts at her command, she depended on cleansing with Palm and Olive oils to protect, improve and preserve the freshness and smoothness of her skin.

This beautifying was not confined to the face alone. The bath was a daily ceremonial with all ancient peoples, and palm and olive oils the cleansers used.

The girl with a clear, smooth skin, radiant with freshness and natural color, should leave jewels to those less fortunate, for she doesn't need them. The charm of a perfect natural complexion attracts far more than elaborate dress and ornaments.

If your complexion lacks the beauty which women envy and men admire, don't depend on clothes and jewelry to draw attention from its defects.

Every woman can transform her bad complexion into a good one, for alluring freshness and clear color isn't a gift of Nature, but a matter of care.

How to have a perfect skin

No girl need be afflicted with a bad complexion, for improvement is simple and easy. Daily cleansing, gentle but thorough, is the secret.

You must use soap, for nothing will remove the dirt, oil and perspiration which collects in the pores and causes most skin trouble.

Choose Palmolive, because its action is soothing. Harsh soap should never be used for washing the face.

Massage the smooth, creamy lather gently into the skin until it removes all clogging deposits. Don't forget your neck and throat. They are as conspicuous as the face for any lack in beauty.

Careful rinsing leaves the skin stimulated, freshened and free from the accumulation which enlarges the pores, causes blackheads and carry infection.

Do this every day

There is too much dirt and dust where most of us live to make it advisable to neglect this cosmetic cleansing even for a day. Powder should be removed, and rouge, if you use it. They combine with dirt and skin secretions in dangerous clogging.

Dry skins are benefited by cold cream after cleansing. If unusual dryness is your trouble, apply a little before, as well as after washing.

Blended from the same oils

Palmolive Soap is blended from the same bland soothing oils which adorned the sumptuous marble baths of Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.

Modern scientists, with all their research, have not been able to discover milder, more soothing, or more efficient soap ingredients.

But although very expensive, the gigantic volume in which Palmolive is produced keeps the price very low. Users profit by Palmolive popularity.

The Palmolive factories, working day and night, and the importation of the rare oils in vast quantities, allow you to enjoy this finest facial soap for the modest price of 10 cents—no more than ordinary soap.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

(One of a series of short funny stories by the celebrated American humorist which appear daily in the Post-Dispatch on this page.)

A FIFTY-FIFTY PROPOSITION

THE original of Peter Dunne's immortal character, "Mr. Dooley," kept a saloon in Chicago. He was a born wit, and, in his way—a very good way it was, too—a philosopher and a student of human nature in its varying aspects.

One wintry evening as he perched behind his bar in friendly conversation with two of his regular patrons there entered a man whose reputation as a ready borrower and a poor payer was more than city-wide.

"Uncle John," he said, briskly, "I'm detailed out of town and I'm a little short of cash—need some coin for traveling expenses. Slip me a tenspot, will you? I'll hand it back to you, sure, on pay night, along with the rest of the small loans I've had off of you lately."

The old man's face gave no sign of his real feelings. He lifted his broad bulk, waddled to the damper, extracted from the till a bill and without a word passed it across the bar to the promising man.

The latter, murmuring his thanks, started to cram it in his pocket, but took a second glance at the greenback.

"Hold on here, Uncle John," he said, "I needed 10 bones and this bill is only a fiver."

"That's all right, me son," said Uncle John; "it makes the thing come out even."

"What do you mean, makes the thing come out even?"

"Why, five I lose and five you lose," said Uncle John.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

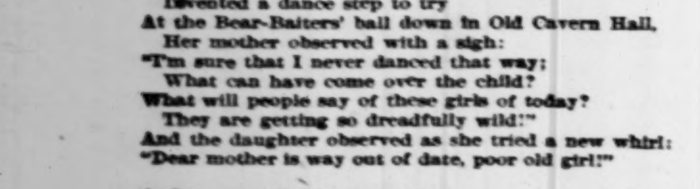
By James J. Montague.

AN OUTLINE OF HISTORY.

When Bullneck, the son of the cave man,
  Made a coat out of jaguar hide,
And strolled up and down through the boulder-strewn town
  With a haughty and arrogant pride,
His father cried out in a fury:
  "Go take off those terrible togs!
I never wore clo'es so outrageous as those;
  You children have gone to the dogs!"
But the kid merely grinned as he hurried on past,
Observing, "Poor father, he's aging so fast!"

When Longhair the cave lady's daughter,
  Invented a dance step to try
At the Bear-Baiters' ball down in Old Cavern Hall,
  Her mother observed with a sigh:
"I'm sure that I never danced that way;
  What can have come over the child?
What will people say of these girls of today?
  They are getting so dreadfully wild!"
And the daughter observed as she tried a new whirl:
"Dear mother is way out of date, poor old girl!"

And so, as each new generation
  Has taken its light-hearted way,
Have parents cried out as their kinds larked about:
  "We never did that in our day!
Those dances! That paint and that powder!
  This striving to keep up the pace
The limbs that they know and the things that they know
  What's going to become of the race?"
And the youngsters observe: "Oh, just let 'em rave—
That's all that is left of them—this side of the grave!"



TOO GRASPING.

With thousands of people only too anxious to give them money, we cannot understand why any bucket-shop proprietor would take the trouble to steal it.

FINISHING THE JOB.

Lord Northcliffe, after a study of the yellow races, has gone to Monte Carlo, probably to take a look at the red and black.

In the "Treat-'Em-Rough" Days

The Stone Age Literary Society was holding its annual meeting and the discussion had turned to complexions.

"I just adore black eyes!" said Miss Woodenclub, impulsively.

"Aha!" exclaimed Peter Stonehatchet, from the rear of the cave, "you're the girl for me!"—Wayside Tales.
